BERLIN HEARS NAZIS TO GET BACK COLONIES

Britain, Germany Negotiating on Concessions Due to Be Disclosed Next Week.

MOVES KEPT SECRET

Conference With Schuschnigg Ends; Views on Purpose of Meeting Differ.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Jittery Europe is facing its third consecutive "Hitler week-end."

The German fuehrer, weighing events of a feverish fortnight, maintained strict secrecy today on the message he will have for the nation and the world in his speech to the reichstag next Sunday.

Speculation as to just what Hitler will say agitated diplomatic quarters, but secrecy as usual was his watchword. Official silence likewise surrounded results of Hitler's talks Saturday with Kurt Schuschnigg, Austria's chancellor.

Debate Colonies.

There were reports in diplomatic circles that his big surprise for the German people Sunday would be return of Germany's lost war colonies. It was said Britain and Germany were negotiating on an important colonial concession for the reich, but that certain conditions would be required.

One of these conditions, it was stated, would be a clarification of Germany's relations with Austria, assuring against any sudden aggression in that sector.

Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, who was said to have urged the Schuschnigg-Hitler meeting, was described as favorable to a settlement by which Hitler would get colonies and Italy would get British recognition of the conquest of Ethiopia.

There were indications that Hitler and Mussolini were working together to reach a lasting solution of the Austrian question, which has been the stumbling block in otherwise pleasant German-Italian friendship.

Offer No Comment.

The week-end surprise of Hitler's meeting with Schuschnigg, coming after the previous week-end surprise of the army and cabinet shakeup, stirred the German public.

But today's morning papers carried just one line of fresh information about Austria's chancellor—that he had returned safe-

TESTS SANITY

Jury Opens New Hearing For Wright After Conviction.

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Paul A. Wright, convicted of manslaughter for the slaying of his wife and John Kimmel, made another bid for freedom today.

The same jury of four women and eight men which convicted him has the task of deciding whether Wright was insane when he shot Mrs. Wright and Kimmel, his friend, to death in the living room of his Glendale home Nov. 9.

Wright pleaded innocent to murder charges and innocent by reason of insanity. He must stand trial today on the second plea.

After his conviction Saturday, Wright collapsed and spent the week-end in the county jail hospital.

A finding of temporary insanity would free Wright. Should the jury decide he not only was insane when he shot the couple but still is mentally deranged he may be sent to an asylum.

AT CAREER'S PEAK

'Flickers Away' During Night With Wife At His Side.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
(INS Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK—O. O. McIntyre died today of a heart attack at the pinnacle of one of the greatest careers in the history of journalism.

The famous columnist passed away shortly after midnight in his Park avenue apartment. Only Mrs. McIntyre was with him when he died. Odd McIntyre didn't believe in doctors and he had none in his last illness.

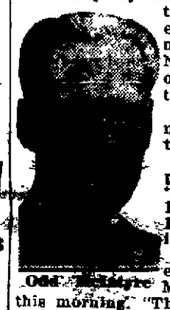
He would have been 54 had he lived until next Friday, his 30th wedding anniversary.

Reporter To The End.

McIntyre had not been in robust health for several years. But New York's best known boulevardier insisted on keeping to his rounds gathering material for "New York Day By Day," the column that is syndicated in about 400 newspapers (The News-Journal is one) from coast to coast.

He was a newspaper man to the end.

McIntyre complained of being "very tired" last Friday. He wrote his last column in bed Saturday. "He just flickered out," Mrs. McIntyre said this morning. "The last thing he said to me was: 'Turn your face toward me so I can see you.'"



Odd McIntyre

Last 'Night Out' Friday.

His last "night out" in his beloved Manhattan was Friday evening when he attended a party with friends. From the party he came home to die in his apartment where, according to a recent biography, hung 60 dressing gowns, 30 pairs of lounging pajamas and 30 pairs of night pajamas, with 92 different perfumes on the dresser.

Besides his widow, his one close survivor, McIntyre leaves an aunt, Mrs. Betty Smarr, of Plattsburg, Mo., and an uncle, Oscar Odd Young, an Idahoan from whom "O. O." inherited his O. O.

SCOUTS TO RULE CITY TOMORROW

Muny Administration Changes Hands For Day as Climax of Scout Celebration.

Mansfield will see its second change in city administration since the first of the year tomorrow when the Boy Scouts take over all city offices from Mayor Claude M. Hunter and his official family and "run" the city government for the day, climaxing the observance here of National Boy Scout week.

Mayor for the day will be Eagle Scout Ralph Arlin, 16, of troop No. 8, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Arlin, Edgewood road. Arlin was elected on by the Liberal ticket in the scout "election" last week, winning in a "landslide" that swept all Liberal candidates into office.

Interviewed late Saturday, "Mayor-elect" Arlin said he did not plan to make any changes in the city government, but would attempt "to bring about bigger ice cream cones for less money." Asked what he thought should be done about the present traffic situation he explained, "I think Walnut street should be widened."

Crawford Burglars Get Away With Three Motors.

BUCYRUS—Thieves broke into two Crawford county schools over the week-end and escaped with three small electric motors.

The burglars gained entrance into the Sulphur Springs school Saturday night by removing a glass from the rear door, and stole a 2-horsepower motor used in cleaning erasers. At the Tiro school the thieves removed a window pane in the rear of the building to gain entrance and escape with a 2-horse power motor used to operate the school water pump and a ½-horse power engine in the manual training shop.

Sheriff Albert French was investigating the robberies today. The only clues were tire tracks, according to the officials.

How'd You Like Her For A Valentine?

Wasn't 'Spring' Lovely? But It's Over So Quickly

Mercury Hits All-Time High of 67 Sunday, City Basks in Bright Sun; Cold's On Way, Though.

Mansfield basked in weather yesterday that would make the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce bite its nails when it hears about Feb. 13 in Ohio. Emigres to Florida will wonder why they ever left the Old Home Town.

An all-time high for Feb. 13 was recorded yesterday when thermometers in Ohio climbed almost to the 70 mark. In Mansfield, Weather Observer Otto Sprunger, recorded a 67-degree reading in the afternoon. Cincinnati reached the highest in the state, with a temperature of 71.

Even the daffodils went daffy and popped up above ground to bask in sunshine that suggested late April and early May; in gardens over the city iris and tulips poked their heads above the warm, moist earth, and pussywillows actually showed pale, furry "hubbins" up and down the long brown stems, that were showing streaks of green.

It Couldn't Last.

But try as she would, February was not able to continue her prankish mood to include St. Valentine's day, and early this morning winter coats felt very comfortable. From the balmy warmth of 67 yesterday afternoon, the thermometer had dropped off 32 points early this morning, when it stood at 35. It had risen only to 38 at noon.

Predictions say that the spring weather is definitely at an end, and that starting sharply with falling temperatures this evening, it will be colder and cloudy tomorrow.

Yesterday's temperature was the highest for that date in the 13 years that a record has been kept in Mansfield, the next highest having been last year when it was 50 degrees.

DECISIONS DUE

Strike Picketing, Tax Rulings Expected From High Court.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The supreme court meets at noon today for a brief decision session before a two-week recess. The court may hand down important decisions involving the right of labor to conduct so-called "second degree" picketing and the exemption of state employes from federal income tax.

The anticipated labor case ruling involves the right of a union to picket a shop where no employes are members of the union.

The tax cases involve the federal government's attempt to collect taxes against income of semi-state employes who owe their position to state appointment but whose salaries, the government contends, actually is derived from private funds.

U.S. CAPITAL RUMBLES WITH FEARS OF WAR

Writer, Summarizing Situation, Points to Vast Spending to Bolster Defenses.

SEA POLICIES ABANDONED

Japan, Germany, Italy Picked as 'Unnamed' Potential Foes of America.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The United States is spending for war faster than at any other period in its peace time history. Congress resounds to oratory on plans for more and bigger battleships, senators call on President Roosevelt for specific foreign affairs pronouncements, notes containing thinly veiled warnings speed along the cables to and from the United States. Lyle C. Wilson, chief of the Washington United Press bureau, interprets this situation in four dispatches. The first dispatch follows:

By LYLE C. WILSON
(Copyright, 1938, by United Press)

WASHINGTON—Fear of war today grips this capital of the richest and most peaceful power on earth.

Fear of war has made national defense spending in the past five and one-half years almost equal the sums expended on the previous 10.

Fear of war has caused the United States in practice to abandon its policy of freedom of the seas.

Fear of war is uttered by President Roosevelt, by the highest naval officer in the land, by responsible senators and by pacifists.

Fears 'Unanimous.'

The fear would appear to be almost unanimous among the spokesmen for those in governmental and civil life who think in terms of international affairs. Mr Roosevelt and the navy fear world conditions. Famous isolationist senators suspect secret agreements and entanglements with foreign powers. Pacifists charge that Mr. Roosevelt's words and policies imply warlike plans The extraordinary and arresting fact is that there is almost unanimous disagreement as to possible causes of portending conflict and what should be done to avoid it.

No enemy is named But by a process of elimination, potential foes appear to be Japan or a combination of Japan with Germany or Italy or both of them. Naval tacticians believe it would be "extremely hazardous" for any Asiatic nation to attempt invasion of the United States, even with a fleet equal to ours. Striking indirectly, an enemy might move at some sphere of prime American interest such as South or Central America, the Phillippine islands or the outlying possessions—Alas-

START HUNT FOR INSANE KILLER

Illinois Fears Maniac Might Try To Murder Wife.

CHESTER, Ill.—(AP)—A police dragnet spread for a criminally-insane killer and his companion who escaped from the Illinois Security hospital was widened today with no definite trace of the fugitives.

Officials of the state institution expressed fear Paul Harrison, 35-year-old hammer slayer of three men and a woman, might seek his former wife, whom they said he attempted to kill when he ran amuck in 1931.

They blamed Harrison, described as "dangerously insane but nevertheless clever and shrewd," for the escape of blond, blue-eyed Peter Fiorek, 22, using keys made from arch supports Harrison obtained in the hospital's shoe repair department.

Here's Tip--Keep Your Auto Tail Light Burning If You Don't Want Traffic Tag

Chief Insists There's No Campaign But 373 Have Got Them In 12 Days.

Although Police Chief Meade K. Bates insists there's no traffic tag campaign on, here's a tip—better keep your tail light burning.

Because police department records show that 373 tickets were issued for that particular violation in the first 12 days of the month.

And don't think that just because your car is parked in the whiteway district that you're immune. You are, of course, until midnight, because no tail light is needed until that hour. But at the stroke of 12, the system is dimmed, and lighted tail lights are "in order."

And Chief Bates' statement to the contrary, the traffic ticket "take" for the first 12 days of February has been $120 greater than for the entire month of January.

Fines collected in January amounted to $329 but only two were for lack of tail lights For the first dozen February days, the collection has been $449. And of that amount, $373 has been for parking without tail lights—traffic violation No. 4 on the traffic ticket.

An editorial appearing in The News-Journal on Jan. 31 concerning a Marion avenue traffic accident involving a tail lightless car may have had nothing to do with it—but it would be economical in the long run, no matter where you park, to leave that tail light on.

It has been reported by those who have been on the scene,

When several minor offenders were released on their own recognizance, police said Barham walked out, signed the sleeping man's name to a receipt for personal effects and went free.

STUDY REQUEST FOR PRE-SCHOOL VACCINATIONS

City, County Boards to Act on Compulsory Immunization In Smallpox Fight.

Action on the proposal for compulsory pre-school smallpox vaccination to prevent future outbreaks of the disease such as the present one in the county will be taken by city and county school officials within the next two weeks, it was indicated today.

Superintendent W. L. Miller of the Mansfield school system said today that the proposal, made Saturday by Dr. Finlay Van Orsdall, chief of the division of communicable diseases of the state health department, would be submitted to the Mansfield school board at its next regular meeting a week from tonight.

Boyd W. Robinson, county superintendent, said the county board would be asked to consider the proposal on the following Friday.

Eight New Cases.

Eight new cases of smallpox were reported in the county from noon Saturday to noon today, making the total number 52. Of this number, five are in the city, bringing the total in the city to 23. Of the eight, four are adults, and the other four are pupils. Three of the eight are in homes where other members of the family are already ill with the disease.

Miller hesitated to express an opinion on compulsory vaccination, expected to be a delicate question, since some parents are expected to be opposed to vaccination, but said it would come before the board.

H. W. Arlin, president of the board, said, "I can't speak for Co-ed 'Tarzan' Faces Jury Today In Child Slaying.

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Mary Keenan O'Connor, 19, co-ed whose athletic prowess gained her the nickname "Tarzan," goes on trial here today for the mud-puddle slaying last Labor day of Nancy Glenn, 5.

Star witness for the prosecution will be Mary's best friend, Mrs. Marie Kibler Phillips, American Olympic team gymnast Reluctantly, she will testify that Miss O'Connor told her that she (Mary) was responsible for Nancy's death.

In an unsigned confession, Miss O'Connor admitted she became annoyed when Nancy kept "begging" her for a ride on her bicycle and in a fit of rage punched the child in the face.

AGED POULTRY DEALER DIES AT CROSSING

A. E. Shafer of Bellville 2nd Traffic Victim of Year In County.

VEHICLE CUT IN HALF

Accident Occurs on Unguarded Grade on Detour; 2 Hurt In City Traffic.

Crushed to death by a southbound B. and O. passenger train at an unprotected crossing east of Bellville this morning, A. E. Shafer, 75, poultry dealer at Bellville for 43 years, became the county's second traffic victim of the year. Up to this time last year, four persons had lost their lives in accidents.

Mr. Shafer was killed instantly at 8:22 a. m. while enroute to his farm in a small delivery truck. He was riding alone. The truck was cut in two by the impact and pieces of it were strewn along the track for 100 feet. Mr. Shafer's body was thrown clear of the wreckage.

Richland County's 1938 Traffic Toll
This date last year—4

The fatal crash occurred at a crossing on a detour on route 13 about one-fourth mile east of Bellville. The crossing is elevated, making it difficult for a motorist to see an approaching train, Deputy Sheriff Glenn Freeman said.

Mr. Shafer, who was a partner with his son in a poultry business at Bellville, had lived his entire life in the Bellville area. He is survived by three sons, Blake, who was affiliated with him in business; Dr. Chase Shafer of Chester, W. Va., and Wayne Shafer of Chicago; and two sisters, Mrs Emma Traul of Bellefontaine and Mrs. Jane Walters of Shelby.

The body was removed to the A. A. Shafer Funeral home in Bellville. Funeral arrangements had not been completed at noon today.

Although highways were crowded as motorists took advantage of the spring-like weather, the traffic death toll in the state was comparatively low over the week-end, six persons losing their lives in mishaps.

Four were reported injured in Richland county accidents, none seriously.

Two Pedestrians Injured.

Two persons were injured when struck by automobiles in Mansfield. They were N. Wayne Minnear, 51, of 186 North Main street, who suffered pelvic injuries and lacerations of his left arm, and Charles Thayer of 94½ North Main street, treated for severe body bruises.

Minnear was hit by a car driven by Robert Parkinson of Millersburg at East Fourth and Diamond streets, police said. Parkinson's car struck Minnear after colliding with a car operated by

New 'Gibraltar' of Far East Opened By Great Britain

SINGAPORE—(AP)—The British empire's most formidable naval base—a gibraltar of the far east—was opened formally today with an American cruiser squadron attending the ceremonies.

Thousands of carefully-checked guests cheered as Sir Shenton Thomas, governor of the straits settlements and personal representative of King George VI, dedicated the huge $55,000,000 drydock.

Rear Admiral Julius Townsend, commanding the battle cruisers Trenton, Memphis and Milwaukee, represented the United States—the only world power invited to be present

Civil lord of the admiralty Colonel J. J. Llewellin welcomed "representatives of the United States whose visit of friendship to these shores so fortunately coincides with the ceremony and whose nation is so closely akin to our own in its aspirations and ideals."

"We of the empire have stood by one another in bad times and good," he said. "We mean to support one another in the future as we have in the past."

The drydock is the largest ever built.

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—Dead tired and sleepy, Clarence Allen walked into the nearest open building to take a nap. Coroner's deputies, attracted by an odd noise, found him snoring gustily in the crematory of the morgue.

Hundreds Flee as New Flood Threats Grip California

RIVERS SPILL OVER ON 19TH DAY OF RAIN

Blizzards Peril Other Areas; Stockton Levies Burst, Farm Fields Destroyed.

(By United Press)

SAN FRANCISCO—Rains, blizzards and high winds ravage California today, bringing serious flood threats, interrupting railroad service, breaking communications and turning hundreds from lowland homes.

It was the 19th consecutive day of rain. Weather bureau records were broken.

The Sacramento and San Joaqin Valleys, richest of California's inland agricultural empire, were imperiled. Thousands of acres of crops were flooded and destroyed.

The mountains were locked in by snows. Immense drifts halted highway and rail traffic. Crews fought to bring stranded passenger trains through.

Two Deaths Reported.

Despite the seriousness of the storms and their wide extent, only two deaths were reported over the week-end.

Torrential downpours on hill and mountain slopes sent numerous slides crashing down on highways and railroad lines. Wide gaps were torn in concrete roads.

In the Sacramento Delta region near Isleton, a rich asparagus district, hundreds of men worked on levees where the river was swollen to dyke top by rains and tides backing up from San Francisco Bay.

Levees burst in the Stockton area, near the junction of the Stockton and Stanislaus rivers, and truckloads of men were recruited in Stockton and rushed to fight the waters spilling over fertile fields.

Wind, almost of gale strength, whipped snow into 30-foot drifts, and from Redding came a report that snow plows were trapped.

The extreme northern part of the state and southern Oregon suffered the brunt of a driving blizzard. A score of towns between Dunsmuir and Oregon were isolated. The worst slides occurred at Dunsmuir, Cantera and Castella. Yreka was isolated.

No Immediate Relief.

The weather bureau reported that no relief was in sight. San Francisco and the surrounding territory, deluged yesterday, had additional rain forecast for today and tomorrow.

Shipping was endangered all along the Northern Pacific coast as a howling gale brought heavy seas.

Latest casualties, which brought the total to 16 since the present storm period began, were:

Tony Sparcevich, crushed to death by a snowslide at Bridgeport, Mono county.

Nicholas Runn, San Francisco, disappeared at Muir Beach, and believed to have been swept into sea.

Interest Lacking On Vandenberg's Coalition Plan

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Vandenberg's renewed proposal for a coalition party of Republicans and "Jeffersonian Democrats" failed today to arouse marked enthusiasm among leaders of either group.

Prominent Republicans indicated in Lincoln day speeches that they would welcome the support of dissenting members of President Roosevelt's party. None, however, went so far as did Vandenberg in suggesting possible submerging of the Republican label.

Speaking at Boston Saturday night, the Michigan senator declared that if saving "the American system" required "altering the Republican identity, I would do it."

Anti-Roosevelt Democrats in congress refrained from public comment on his proposals, first advanced last September. Some, however, said privately that they preferred at this time to work for their principles within their own party.

National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton was among the speakers who bid for Democratic support. Proposing a joint toast to Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln, he said:

"The Republican party is more Jeffersonian today than those who pay mere lip service to his name."

Three Mansfield chiropractors, arrested on a complaint of the state medical board, are scheduled to appear in municipal court Feb. 21 to answer charges of advertising as a practitioner of medicine without a certificate.

The charges, filed by Frank Dorsey, investigator for the medical board, are the outgrowth of a periodical campaign by the state organization. Named in the affidavits are Flo A. Morris, 109 North Mulberry street; E. A. Benning, 138 West Third street, and Ben L. Sites, 188 West Fourth street.

Court records show that all three have been cited under the same section of the state law on at least one other occasion, while one has been haled into court four times. Sites has paid $75 on two charges with two other affidavits against him have been dismissed in the past 10 years. Benning has paid $50 in fines in two cases while the third was dismissed. Mrs. Morris was fined $25 and costs in May, 1936.

ST. OLAF'S FAMED CHOIR THRILLS AUDIENCE OF 600 AT SENIOR HIGH

Singing in Senior high school auditorium Sunday afternoon, the world-famous St. Olaf Lutheran choior won the acclaim of the audience before the first number on a 90-minute program had been completed.

Described as a symphony of voices, the choral group of 60 college students received thunderous ovation after every number, and when the singers left the stage the audience applauded for several minutes.

Presented under the auspices of the Mansfield Optimist club, the concert attracted less than 600 persons, about one-third of whom were from neighboring cities.

The choir's program was largely of religious numbers and included one composed by Dr. F. Melius Christiansen, the director, and another by his youngest son, Paul.

Director Christiansen, a huge, white-haired Norwegian, has complete command of his group of college singers, his baton drawing a remarkable range of tone and volume from the group. From a barely audible whisper, the unit of voices would swell until the volume re-echoed through the auditorium. The group sings without accompaniment.

The choir sang only one encore, repeating a part of Dr. Christiansen's own composition, "Beauty in Humility." Only two of the members of the choir appeared in solo parts. They were Miss Gertrude Boe Overby, soprano, and Adelaide Tovson, contralto.

Twenty-five men and 35 women make up the choral group which has brought wide renown to St. Olaf college, a small Lutheran school in Northfield, Minn.

The choir's appearance here was the only one in Ohio as the singers return home after a long eastern tour. They will sing in Chicago today, in Madison, Wis., Tuesday, and then will go to Northfield.

Despite the comparatively small audience, Atty. Marshall C. Moore, chairman of the Optimist club committee in charge of the program, said the concert would net about $75 for the club's work at the Friendly House.

SEAMEN ABOARD ICEBREAKER SEE SMOKE ON FLOE

Soviet Vessel Breaks Ice to Within 15 Miles of Refuge of Arctic Observers.

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—(UP)—The icebreaker Taimir landed two airplanes on an improvised ice-floe airfield today, seeking to reach four Russian scientists isolated on the ice a few miles off the Greenland coast.

The Taimir sought to blast its way yard by yard through the ice jam with dynamite. So thick was the ice that in many hours yesterday only 330 yards was made, and then the Taimir's master decided to try the planes.

At 10 p. m. Saturday, the Taimir was but 20 miles from the ice floe, flashes of the ship's searchlight, and smoke from its funnel, could be seen on the floe; those on the icebreaker could see the smoke drifting up from the snow house in which the four scientists were housed

15 Miles From Floe.

At noon yesterday, after 14 hours of constant fighting, the icebreaker had made five miles and was 15 miles from the floe.

For some days, the four men on the ice floe had been able, at moments, to see the Greenland coast to the west. But when they saw the first white flash from the icebreaker's searchlight, they had their first real contact with the world since, on May 22 last, they were landed by airplane at the North pole to establish the first polar weather station.

On the ice floe were Prof. Ivan D. Papinin, leader; Ernest T. Krenkel, wireless operator; Pyotr Shirshov and Eugene Fedorov.

They had volunteered to establish a weather station at the top of the world and refain for one year to study meteorological conditions in order to enrich knowledge of science, not only as regards transpolar airplane service between Russia and the United States, but as regards weather conditions in a large part of the northern hemisphere.

The scientists were landed at the North pole, with food for 18 months to two years and equipment of every sort, by giant Russian airplanes.

They found within a few days that their hope of a permanent North pole station was vain. The great ice floe on which they established their base began floating steadily southward. It pursued a course, zig zagging somewhat but always in a southerly direction, of more than 1,000 miles.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

"Feebly Forceful."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT had an expression which in these days might well be employed to describe the present White House incumbent. He used to say of men whose deeds failed to fulfill the expectations aroused by their words that they were "feebly forceful."

Certainly an increasing number of people seem to be acquiring this idea of the president—and from sources which are significant. Of course, it would not mean much if this view were expressed by consistent critics or political opponents, but when it comes from individuals and groups which in the past not only have been favorable but have applauded his boldness and courage, it seems indicative of a change in attitude.

FOR EXAMPLE, it is not the biased writers who now lay the most stress upon the struggle for molding the president's policy, going on between Mr. Richberg on the one side and what is called the Corcoran-Jackson group on the other. On the contrary, the most vivid reports on this conflict among his advisers have come from his friends. It is also true that his vacillation between Dr Morgan and his moderate TVA policies and the vehement Mr. Lilienthal, whose radical ideas would expensively expand government competition in ways not hinted at in the original conception—the presidential indecision in that controversy is impatiently commented upon by men, in congress and out, who have been his admiring supporters.

IN BRIEF, since the present depression began, Mr. Roosevelt has wabbled between two courses of action, to the intense exasperation of the advocates of both among his intimates. The result is that there is today in congress more general criticism of the president than at any time since he entered the White House. Unable yet to bring himself to the point of following his left-wing friends into another inflationary spending spree, he is equally incapable of acting upon the advice of both big and little business men to repeal designated and devastating tax laws and abandon the effort to further regulate and restrict industry.

TO DO the first is to repudiate the things he has said over and over to his more conservative advisers, and, in fact, to retreat from the assurances he has given more than once. But to do the second means that the radicals, who, from the start, have been responsible for his attacks upon business and his general disposition to incite resentment against success, may turn upon him with the cry that he has "let the people down." From that he shrinks. The popular picture of himself as the friend of the masses in their battle against intrenched wealth is so dear to him that he cannot bear to have it charged that he has weakened—even by irresponsible people who have their own political purposes to serve—even when he knows that the revival of business by the common-sense methods urged upon him is the one true way of promoting the interests of the masses.

ALL THIS adds up to the fact, agreed upon by his franker friends, that all the president has in the way of present policy can be summed up as follows: First, he refuses to believe that business is as badly off as he is told or as the evidence shows; second, he thinks that in the next three months natural causes will bring about a recovery; third, if they do not, then he is inclined to think there is nothing to do but spend more money. If he has anything more concrete in his mind at the moment, those who have closest contact with him do not know it.

IT IS TRUE that at his press conferences he continues to convey the idea that everything is under control, that he has a definite idea of where he is going. But there he is "giving a show."

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The movie academy's annual handout of goldplated Oscars still is in the future but here are a few nominations of award winners in years to come.

A poll of prominent directors showed these girls (and a couple of boys) rated tops with them as stardom prospects for 1938.

Coincidence: The directors all were from Paramount but that didn't keep them from naming seven probabilities outside their own bailiwick. The directors were Ernst Lubitsch, Cecil B. DeMille, Fritz Lang, William Wellman, George Auchinbaud.

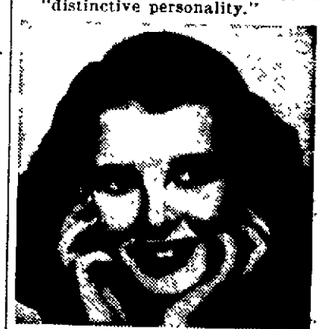
Their choices, in order, were:

OLYMPE BRADNA (Paramount) also from Paris. They all liked her in "Souls at Sea," expect to like her more in "Stolen Heaven."

PHYLLIS WELCH (Metro) but playing in Harold Lloyd's Paramount release, "Professor Beware," was named for her "proved acting ability"

ANNABELL (20th Century-Fox) hails from Paris. Picking her must have been easy—she's an established star abroad, also in English-made pictures. Beauty and acting ability won her mention.

MARJORIE WEAVER (20th Century-Fox) chosen for her work in "Second Honeymoon," which revealed, the directors say, a "distinctive personality."



MARY MAGUIRE (Warner Bros.) is the girl brought here as the "Mary Pickford of Australia," but our judges picked her because they were wowed by her "photographic beauty."

Give Small Daughter Useful Tools For Play

You may wonder why little Susan still enjoys the battered cleaning set you gave her at Christmas while she ignores the handsome wooly rabbit that squeaks and wiggles its ears. According to psychologists, her behavior is perfectly natural. Children love toys which enable their own creative powers to have full play.

That's one reason why miniature housekeeping tools are always welcome gifts for children any time of the year. As the child sweeps and scrubs, bathes her dolls and makes their clothes she feels a sense of importance in doing the things her mother does. Washing a corner of the kitchen floor with her own little scrubbing brush and pail while mother scrubs up will give her more satisfaction than a mechanical toy that performs by itself. Meanwhile she is getting a wholesome introduction to the tasks that she will probably have to do, or at least to supervise, in later years.

Mrs. Ilena Marks and daughter, Claudia, Woodhill road, will sail this week from New York City aboard the Aquitania for South America where they will spend several weeks.

Our Club Members Entertained At Valentine Dance

Midst decorations carrying out a color scheme of red and white, 12 tables were arranged in the ball-room of the Mansfield-Leland hotel Saturday night when members of the Our club held the St. Valentine dinner dance. The tables were centered with bouquets of red carnations, white chrysanthemums and stevia and lighted with red tapers.

Favors of compacts were presented to the women guests. During dinner a five-act floor show of talent imported from Cleveland entertained. The show included novelty dancing, a singer, a juggler and other acts.

Music for dancing was furnished between courses and after the dinner by Shively-Yates' orchestra. Approximately 70 couples were present for the affair which was the final scheduled dance of the club for the winter season.

Hosts and hostesses for the affair were Mr and Mrs Louis J. Ott, chairman, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Brown and Mr and Mrs. Charles E Nail.

Cleanliness Contributes To Life of Garments

We who keep our neckwear in a state of perpetual freshness by washing after every wearing can sympathize with the laundryman whom Queen Elizabeth ordered beheaded because one of her favorite neck ruffs went to pieces in the wash. The trembling henchman, the legend has it, was saved only at the zero hour when Sir Walter Raleigh intervened and convinced his irate ruler that it had been necessary to use strong chemicals to get the royal neckwear clean.

The queen's cleanliness standards might provoke raised eyebrows if we didn't know that all this happened some 400 years ago. If good soaps were available at that time, the royal ruff would have been put in the wash long before strenuous cleaning methods were called for, thus preserving it for the queen's adornment and for the interest of posterity.

Domestics Should Have Health Cards For Safety

"Health cards" for workers in homes where there are children have been established in Westchester county, New York state. Says Dr Fairfax Hall, director of pediatrics at the New Rochelle hospital, as reported in a story: "We owe it to our children to encourage a periodic medical examination of domestic employes as a private health measure."

It is said a survey has shown that children may contract syphilis, tuberculosis and even meningitis from affectionate contact with servants in the home.

Women seeking employment in homes who are a bit resentful of the health card, are shown that it is to their benefit, as a "clean bill of health" will create a high type of employment at a higher wage.

Flowers Should Be Used Throughout House

Mrs Constance Spry of London England is a flower arranger par excellence. She is in America to lecture before various garden clubs in places she "has never heard of," she states.

Mrs Spry believes that flowers should be used to decorate rooms just as are curtains, rugs, wall paper, etc. They are not a sentimental touch to a room, she asserts, but a decorative accent.

Mrs Spry decorated the rooms at the chateau in Cande last summer in which the Duke of Windsor and the then Mrs Simpson were married. She says the duchess has "frightfully good taste."

Styles For The Well-Dressed Mermaid

Miss Naomi E. Stapleton, Clinton, Ia., co-ed at St. Petersburg, Fla., Junior college, models two bathing suits, above, "Sam McLeod maze" one-piece; and below, crinkly rainbow crepe suit.

In the south, all along the Florida beaches, the photographer is snapping pictures of winsome girls and leading society matrons from various northern cities in bathing suits that will lead the style parade at the northern resorts in a few months. Here we see two of the new one-piece models which are destined for popularity all summer. The suit worn by the model reclining on the hot sands is a very simple one. It has no belt and no decorations, its principal attraction being in the colors of the crinkly rainbow crepe of which it is made. The other suit is made after the same pattern and is set off by the newest rage in mesh beach sandals.

MARRIAGE IS CAREER

The personnel bureau of New Jersey College for Women made an occupational survey of last year's graduates. It found that of the 150 alumnae who answered a questionnaire, not one of the ten who had married holds a job. This is the first instance recorded by the bureau when no married member of the preceding graduating class has been employed. Marriage appears to be of new importance as a career for college graduates.

OLD FAMILY TREATMENT FOR COLDS AND BODY BUILDING....

Father John's Medicine Not Only Helps Break Up Colds But Builds Up The Body.

Was Named by the People—Its 83 Years of Success is Convincing Proof of Merit—

This medicine was originally prescribed for Rev. Father John O'Brien, of Lowell, Mass., in 1855, by his physician.

He afterwards recommended it to his parishioners and friends.

In this way it became popularly known as Father John's Medicine, and many thousands have since been benefited by this valuable prescription.

No amount of advertising alone could possibly have built the reputation that Father John's Medicine has earned and maintained for over eighty years as a treatment for colds and a body-builder, unless it had proven value and merit.

Illness Is Obstacle to Romance

By VIRGINIA LEE

A YOUNG MAN by the name of LUKE has written me and this is his very unusual problem:

He is very much in love with a girl who seems to be an ideal sweetheart and wife. She loves him just as much as he loves her, and their future would, I am sure, be a happy one if it were not for his poor health. She is looking forward to it and planning for their home and children.

Poor Luke never yet has been able to tell his girl friend that a physician has told him that his health will never be good. "The doctor said when she has children every one will be born sickly and will suffer just like me And he also said it will take up all of her time caring for a sick husband, and she will be very much disappointed in married life."

Luke cannot bear to have any other man have his girl, and he can't bear to break this news to his sweet girl friend. He wishes he could die in his sleep because he is going through so much, and he wonders if there is anyone among our readers who has anything like this to endure.

Of course you give me no inkling of your disease—if you have a particular trouble, Luke. So many ills that once were considered hopeless are now being treated and cured, that you should not take one doctor's diagnosis and give up hope. I do think the girl you love should know about your state of health. She could help you fight for it, and just talking it over with her would help you and give you peace of mind.

Doctors are human beings, you know, and are sometimes mistaken. Go to another, and then another and another, if necessary, and try to get all the latest advice on whatever your trouble is. And keep up your courage. That is more than half the battle. Of course I do not know about your condition, but unless you have an incurable and inheritable disease that would be transmitted to your offspring I certainly would not despair.

HILDA AND FRENCHY—Am I right in suspecting that one person wrote the two letters which reached me at the same time, or that you two together composed these wonderful epistles.

However it may be, I am no mind reader or prophetess so cannot tell you the state of mind of the men you love And, moreover, I feel you are trying to flimflam me. Seems sort of a waste of time for you to write such letters, and for me to answer, isn't it?

It is an excellent idea when sending cut flowers to a hospital to send an inepensive vase with them. Nurses often find it difficult to find vases enough to hold flowers.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Dicky, so often thoughtlessly inconsiderate, is given occasionally to royal exhibitions of solicitude for me, so charming that I forget the less pleasing side of the marital tapestry. Nothing could have been more pleasingly gallant than his dictum that I must have a nap before I started for the drive to the city with Mary. His mother beamed at him, and even Miss Whitlock cracked the cynical shell of her professional outlook, smiling an admiring glance toward him.

"I think your idea is most excellent, she told him. "And I am sure, when Mrs. Veritzen knows why the journey is delayed, she will be content."

"Would it do any good if I came up and played chess with her?" he asked. "She used to be daffy over the game."

"That would be splendid," she said with enthusiasm. "When can you come up?"

"As soon as I've seen this lady to her downy couch," Dicky answered with an airy wave of his hand toward me. "If I don't tuck her in and lock the door on her, she's likely to get down and scrub the cellar stairs, or do some other chore she fancies needs seeing to. But after I've seen that she's settled, only a few minutes, for I shall be exceedingly strict with her, I'll be up and keep Mary from pawing the air."

Dicky Scolded.

"Richard!" his mother expostulated, "don't use such horrid expressions!"

"All right, Victoria Regina," he said affectionately. "I won't do it any more. How about it, Madge? Are you pretty nearly ready to undo the feed—through with your luncheon?" he finished shamefacedly, while even his stately mother laughed at his patent discomfiture.

"I have just finished," I told him truthfully, laying down my dessert fork and rising with an apology to my mother-in-law and Miss Whitlock.

"How soon do you want me?" he asked Miss Whitlock.

"Whenever you're ready," she answered, and Mother Graham said decidedly:

"You needn't hurry, Richard. I shall go up and sit with Mary until you come. I promised her a visit this morning, but she slept most of the time."

I caught a glint in Miss Whitlock's eyes which told me that she had drawn freely on her imagination in reporting Mary asleep, thus protecting her from her grandmother's devoted but fatiguing attention. But she bowed graciously to the inevitable, and turned to the older woman with an apparently pleased smile.

Not Asleep Now.

"I can guarantee that she isn't asleep now," she said. "Come up whenever you like."

"I shall," my mother-in-law retorted with decision, and Dicky came around the table and slipped his hand beneath my arm.

"You are my prisoner," he said. "Snap into the lockstep."

It was on that frivolous note we left the dining room and ascended the stairs. Once safely in my room, he dropped his lightness of manner and drew me into his arms.

"Look here, Sweet!" he said, "you may not know you're sore at me, but you are. And I don't want you to be mad at me when we're leaving home this way. The Lord He only knows how we're coming back again — we may be on stretchers or emulating the Kilkenny cats, but I'd like to have you throw away whatever's bothering you, and give me one of your old kisses to take with me Allah knows I need some sort of heartening."

All Rancor Gone.

There was the familiar tenderness in his voice which always banishes all rancor from me, no matter what cause I may have for resentment. There was also something else, a note of poignant anxiety as if he were fearing something unpleasant, even sinister, awaiting him in the city. With a sudden wifely yearning to shield him from whatever he feared, I threw my arms around him and kissed him tenderly.

"I'm not angry at you, Sweetheart," I whispered. "And when you feel like it, come and tell me what it is that's bothering you. That's one of my best performances, being a safety valve."

"You blessed girl!" he said chokingly "I'll remember that. And now, I'm going to make sure you take your nap.

He stooped and unlaced my shoes and helped me change my gown for a negligee as deftly as a woman. Then he picked me up, deposited me on the bed, drew a light coverlet over me, went to the window and adjusted the shade and screen and, returning, stooped and kissed me again.

"That's for pleasant dreams," he said. "Don't you dare stir from here for two hours."

Thin or Fat Exercise For Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty."

Most girls seem to think that the life of the average movie star is one of luxury and indolence—a sort of Utopian existence, you might say. But you can take it from me—and I'm talking of what I've seen since I've been out here in the cinema city—those screen charmers have to work mighty hard. And they have plenty to worry about, too.

Take Loretta Young, for instance. Loretta is considered one of the shapeliest girls in the whole of Hollywood, yet she has to be extremely careful of that figure of hers. For Loretta tends to lose weight easily. And she considers it harder for a thin girl to gain weight than for a fat girl to lose weight.

Thin girls often find it extremely difficult to add a few pounds to their weight and a few curves to their figures. A correct diet is most essential if an increase in the weight of the body is desired.

The trouble with most women who are trying to gain weight is that they try to stuff themselves with all sorts of fattening foods without any thought of balance. Of course, milk, cream, butter, sweets and starches are all valuable additions to the diet of the woman anxious to add to her weight. But it is a fatal error for her to confine her diet to rich and fattening foods alone. Such a course might, in time, lead to serious digestive disorders. Fresh fruits and green vegetables, which are now procurable in frozen form, and are just as rich in vitamins as the fresh products, by the way, must be a part of each meal. And to this foundation the thin woman should add to the more nourishing foods listed above.

Need Not Stuff Self.

A thin woman generally has very little appetite for food. She usually eats lightly, and her stomach rebels at the thought of hearty dishes. Yet she must eat well, to provide her body with plenty of nourishment. That does not mean, however, that she must stuff herself to the point of discomfort just because she wants to gain weight, for if she cannot consume more in quantity than ordinarily, she can select foods that are not very bulky or filling, but that are highly nutritious.

According to Loretta, another grave mistake that the underweight person often makes is to refrain from exercise. Loretta always practices rhythmic exercises daily, for she knows that it will greatly benefit her figure. The average girl has the idea that exercise is only for fat women, and she's afraid that if she is too active, she will become thinner than she is already.

Of course, this idea is entirely wrong. Exercise helps women to gain weight and acquire curves just as effectively as it does to assist heavy women in losing weight. Exercise makes the tissues active and healthy. When a woman who is fat exercises, her adipose tissues break down as her tissues become active. And when a thin woman exercises, firm muscle develops in her starved tissues; the exercise stimulates her circulation and enables the blood to carry nourishment to her impoverished tissues.

Another reason why the underweight individual should exercise is that, if she is on a weight gaining diet, she may acquire added poundage only on certain portions of her body. As a result, her figure would not appear evenly proportioned. Proper exercising not only helps to develop the body, but also molds it upon harmonious lines.

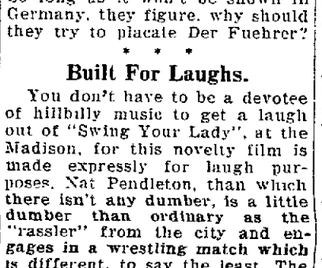
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NERVE REQUIRED

Plenty of nerve is required to lead away from your own ace against a suit contract, in the hope that your partner has the king. But if that is your only chance to get a ruff which is necessary in order to beat the contract, you have no alternative. You risk giving the opponent an overtrick in return for an opportunity to down him. That sort of gambling constitutes winning bridge.



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West's opening bid on this deal was 1-Spade, North doubled, East bid 2-Spades. South 3-Diamonds, West 3-Spades and North 5-Diamonds.

Against this contract, West led his singleton club, which South won with the Q. The contract looked perfectly safe to the declarer with the loss of one trick in diamonds and one in spades.

However, the declarer failed to reckon on his opponent in the West. Robert R. Graham of San Francisco When South led the diamond K to the second trick, Mr. Graham won with the A. He realized that if he could get East into the lead before the diamond 2 was picked up, he had a chance to set the contract With that hope in mind, he decided to lead a low spade from his own tenace holding, in the hope that the the spade K was in the East hand. It was. East got the significance of this and returned a club, which Mr. Graham ruffed. As a result, the contract was set one trick.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

How should South play for 4-Hearts against leads of the diamond A and K, followed by a switch to the spade Q? Bear in mind that West opened the bidding with 1-No Trump.

THEATER

ONE of the year's safest bets is that Eric Remarque's "Three Comrades" will not be shown in Germany when the film is completed. But M-G-M, the producing company, knew that before work was started on the film which stars Robert Taylor. All of the Remarque books are on the Hitler black-list and the author exiled. The book does not deal with Nazism or the Hitler regime but with the chaotic events following the World war which led up to the Nazi coup. Workers on the production have promised however, that no punches will be pulled as they were in "The Road Back". So long as it won't be shown in Germany, they figure, why should they try to placate Der Fuehrer?

Built For Laughs.

You don't have to be a devotee of hillbilly music to get a laugh out of "Swing Your Lady", at the Madison, for this novelty film is made expressly for laugh purposes. Nat Pendleton, than which there isn't any dumber, is a little dumber than ordinary as the "rassler" from the city and engages in a wrestling match which is different, to say the least. The Weaver Brothers and Elviry, radio hillbillies, make their first screen appearance and provide an interesting variety of their popular music. Louise Fazenda is on the other end of the wrestling match, with no holds barred, and if he "whups her he gets her for his'n'" Humphrey Bogart is a likable villain, not too wicked, and Frank McHugh and Allen Jenkins are runners-up in the dumber-than-Pendleton contest. The pictures runs through Tuesday.

Ameche Opposite Henie.

Don Ameche, who plays opposite Sonja Henie in "Happy Landings" at the Ohio, came to the screen as a radio star and not a very good actor, but after a course that outrivals the old stock company training courses, he emerges one of the better of the younger male players on the screen. Since Ameche became master of ceremonies of the Charlie McCarthy-Edgar Bergan-Nelson Eddy Sunday night radio programs, he has had an opportunity to play opposite some of greatest women stars of the stage and screen, with a different kind of sketch each week. The training has been invaluable and makes him one of the most sought after of the younger players. Cesar Romero will win new admirers as the band leader with whom the little Norwegian is in love. Jean Hersholt and Ethel Merman complete the major players.

Sensational Play.

Lillian Hellman's sensational stage play, "The Children's Hour", which came to the screen under the title and greatly changed plot of "These Three", is another in the series of revivals at the Majestic, and will be the major attractinon for three days starting Tuesday. Joel McCrea, Merle Oberon and Miriam Hopkins are the three figures whose lives are ruined by a vicious gossip and lies of a neurotic child. Bonita Granville has the role of the "meanest child" in modern literature. "The Black Doll", with Nan Grey, Donald Woods and Edgar Kennedy, is the secondary feature.

Bette Davis at Ritz.

Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, Ian Hunter and Anita Louise are the quartet in an unusual love story which gives the star, Miss Davis, a role particularly suited to her personality. Once a gangster's "moll", she tries to begin life all over and gets a start as secretary to an attorney who is much attracted to her, when a too ambitious newspaper reporter drags her old life over the front pages and thus starts a new series of tragedies and troubles. Henry Fonda's love for her seems to offer a new sanctuary, when again the fates interfere. It is a dramatic narrative of a girl whose luck was mostly bad.

Invitations, Thank You Notes Topic

By EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: My son has asked me to write to the mother of a girl whom he would like to bring home from college some week-end to visit us. I am perfectly willing that he should bring her home but what am I supposed to say to her mother?

Answer: I don't know why your son wants you to write to the mother of the girl. After all, she cant be a child. Properly, you should write to the girl inviting her to spend the week-end with you, or at least seconding your son's invitation. That is, you would write: "Dear Miss Smith, will you come on Friday, the twenty-eighth of January for over Sunday? It would give my husband and me, as well as Arthur, so much pleasure to have you with us. Very sincerely yours."

Dear Mrs. Post: I have been divorced five years but am still quite young. Recently, I was one of the attendants at my brother's wedding, and never thinking about the fact that I had been married, I stood with the other bridesmaids reaching for the bride's bouquet when she threw it to us from the stairway as she left to dress for going away. In fact, the bride had even told me she would try to throw it to me. Since the wedding I have heard that people criticized my bad taste in taking part in this bouquet tradition. As it happens, I did not catch the bouquet!

Answer: I don't think that you committed any very great offense unless, of course, your decree or your religious belief does not permit you to remarry ever. But if you have the privilege of remarrying it seems to me that you, as well as any one else, might have caught the bouquet.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, February 15.

A VERY lively and exciting day is presaged from the predominant stellar influences. There is likely to be a sudden move, journey or change that may have a vital effect on the life, both in business and private relations. Romance and adventure are involved, but it would be well not to make too rash or hasty decisions, or to be completely carried away by emotional stirrings. Also hesitate before getting entangled with young people or servants.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great adventure, through upheaval, change, travel or romance, probably of an unexpected nature. Radical influences are at work on the life, but be careful about making decisions and dealings with young persons or servants.

A child born on this day may be talented in very original and surprising lines. It may be inventive, adventurous and romantic. It also may be bright and humorous, and may seek its friends among unusual people.

Grated cheese melted in a white sauce or tomato sauce makes a delicious rarebit to serve on toast or vegetables.

ADAMICK LOOKS GOOD TO NEW YORK BOXING FANS IN GYM DRILLS

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK—(INS)—In all the the outcry over the man so far, probably the sincerest tribute yet paid Jimmy Adamick, the prize fighter, came unconsciously in the last twenty-four hours from the public information or blather department of the Twenty Century Sporting club. It began talking yesterday about Harry Thomas. In fact, it probably will have to talk Thomas up the rest of the way right into Friday night and right up to the ringside at the garden. Adamick, in three days of training here, has caught on like a clamp.

Moreover, rated by his gymnasium record. I'd say there's only one thing that might shake him off now and that'll be himself. The fellow was pretty abashed for a while that first day in a New York gymnasium and a thing like that might return for his first night in a New York ring. In other words, he can still get the "big town tremors."

Dempsey got them. So did James J. Jeffries and it's a matter of history that the only way they could come back here was to bring the heavyweight championship with them. Tuffy Griffith was quite notable in the same connection and he never really came back at all. It doesn't always work out that way, although Fred Apostoli and Freddie Steele, of the current generation, could and probably would speak feelingly on the subject. But it's no use now to tell them it's all a huge delusion. By this time, they know it themselves.

Still, this Adamick not only is quite the best looking young heavyweight on the horizon, but he's an innately nice young man, solemn, serious and full of high resolve And I'd dislike seeing him get upset about us on his first visit. For one thing, we're not worth it.

For another, I somehow feel that, just as it was with Dempsey and Jeffries, his first visit won't be his last.

OF COURSE, this man Thomas might rearrange my ideas and Adamick's too A lot of us went wrong on Thomas in the Schmeling fight and we were still wrong the next day when we wrote that Schmeling carefully cut his man down to what the requisition called for and, then spread him out like a blue print.

The only one who didn't quite see it that way was Schmeling, who was clipped by the first punch of the fight and hasn't changed his mind yet.

Thomas, as a matter of fact, is something for Adamick to worry about The big town isn't. It's a sucker for anything. It has convex heels and bunions on its shoulder blades. It tips right over like a drunk

All he has to do is make his fight and the sports of the town will be his for the asking And, I repeat by that time he won't want them

Hosts to LaGrange Friday; Whip Columbus East as Reserves Top Shiloh.

UNLESS an attempt is made to play the postponed Willard game, Mansfield high school's hardwood rompers will bring their regular schedule to a close Friday night.

Slated to oppose the Tygers this week-end is the crack LaGrange, Ind. team, which is rated highly in Hoosier basketball circles this year. Mansfield engages in the district tournament next week.

Game Uncertain.

Coach Russ Murphy was uncertain today whether the Willard game will be played. It was scheduled for last Tuesday, but was called off at the request of Willard school authorities because of the local smallpox outbreak.

If the game is played, it will probably be staged the early part of next week, Murphy stated.

The Tygers run their list of victories to nine games Saturday night when they toppled Columbus East, 35 to 33, in another thrilling melee on the home boards before a small crowd.

Mansfield, which has lost six games, found the Capital City team tougher than the majority of its opponents, but came through the victor because of improved play.

Showing marked improvement in their work around the basket, the Tygers, also strengthened by the return of injured Tommy Scott, led virtually all the way as they topped one of the strongest teams in the Columbus area this winter.

Press Mansfield.

While Mansfield held the advantage during the greater part of the game, the Orientals were never so far behind that they were not able to overtake the Tygers with a couple of baskets.

The visitors knotted the count in the last minute, and it took a tip-in shot by Elmer Dials, one of the stars of the game, to cinch the verdict.

Dials', whose rebound work was a feature of the game, broke a 33-33 tie with his basket.

In addition to controlling the rebounds and winning the ball game with his timely bucket, Dials led the Tygers in scoring with an even dozen points.

Scott, who did not appear in the preceding game because of a bad ankle, accounted for 11, and it was his points which enabled the Tygers to stay ahead of the invaders in the first half.

Mansfield was ahead all the way except for the first minute when East held a 2-0 lead and near the close of the game when the Columbusites rallied to knot the count.

The Men of Murphy held a 10-6 lead in the first period, 19-14 at the half and 28-25 going into the final quarter.

Stop Shiloh Streak.

The Tygers presented one of their best performances of the season, but they were little more spectacular than the sophomore reserve team, which toppled Shiloh of the Twin-Valley league from the Ohio Class B undefeated ranks.

The victory was the 11th straight for Coach Harry Mehock's athletes, and it brought to a close a 11-game streak for Shiloh.

Led by Gene Rudolph, who piled up 15 points, the reserves gained the lead on which they rode to victory in the third period. The reserves trailed 8-5 in the opening period, but came back to tie the score 16-all at the intermission.

Shiloh is the strongest club the reserves have met this season, and their defeat of the touted Drummer Boys was highly unexpected.

The game was a nip-and-tuck affair in which the lead changed frequently.

Bob and Jay Moser scored 13 and 10 points, respectively, to lead Shiloh, which is listed as one of the co-favorites in thsi year's county tournament.

The No 2 reserve team of the high school lost to the Celtics, 21 to 12, in the other preliminary game.

LOSE ROBERTS, TIED

Barons Tied By Lowly Eagles As Goalie Sits on Sidelines.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(INS)—Loss of Goalie Moe Roberts, suffering an injured leg, was felt today by the Cleveland Barons after they had been tied 5 and 5 by the lowly New Haven Eagles in an International-American league hockey game.

Paddy Byrne, formerly of the Providence Reds, substituted for Roberts, who was injured in Cleveland Saturday night. Jean Baptiste Pusie, of the Barons, furnished some excitement when he climbed into the stands after a persistent heckler. The law stopped him

Y. M. C. A. to Conduct Basketball Tourney.

A basketball tournament involving amateur teams of two classes will be staged by the Y.M.C.A. late in March or early in April, D. D. Cram, Y physical director, announced today. Out-of-townu teams as well as Mansfield teams will be eligible, he stated.

The elimination will be divided in A and B classes. Teams will be classified according to ages.

Breaks State Doubles Mark

Cleveland Pair Rolls 1494 on Canton Alleys.

CANTON — (AP) — The Ohio men's bowling tournament had a new doubles record to shoot at today in the score of 1,494 rolled by Charles Lausche and Frank Franz of the Cleveland Waldorf team.

The Clevelanders' heavy guns also fired into the singles lead. Walter Ward of the same team had singles games of 256, 222 and 259 for a high total of 737. The previous leader was Vance McDowell of Akron with 732.

Lausche and Franz went far out ahead of the previous doubles leaders, Marvin Summa and Alex Nicol of Akron, who had 1.352. Franz rolled up 758 and Lausche had 736. Max's Sports of Cleveland lead five-man teams with 3.144.

State Cagers Aid Wildcats

Beat Purdue to Enable N. W. to Break Tie.

CHICAGO—(AP)—The job of overhauling Northwestern's surprising Wildcats in the Big Ten basketball title race will have to be done all over again.

Purdue pulled up into a tie for the lead last week at five victories and one defeat, after Northwestern had set the pace all season through having played more games than its main rivals.

Saturday night the Wildcats took over sole position of first place by trimming Wisconsin, 27 to 23, at Madison, while Purdue was taking an unexpected 37 to 29 thumping from Ohio State at Columbus.

WHEN BASKET TOSSING WAS FORGOTTEN

Fordham and City College lads forgot about shooting the leather in their New York encounter long enough to shoot a few punches. That fellow on the left who seems to be hopping mad is Hassmiller of Fordham. Goldstein (4) of City, and Weil of Fordham also appear to be getting "handy." Jarman (8) seems to be more vocal than violent. Finally all was order and City College went on to win, 37-35.

RANDOM SHOTS

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

THE signing of Dewey Stover by the Moultrie, Ga., club of the Georgia-Florida league has no bearing on the Mansfield situation.

Many Mansfield baseball fans regard the shift of Stover as a definite indication that the Boston Red Sox will not operate an Ohio State league club in this city this year. This is untrue, however.

The Red Sox may not return to Mansfield, but the Stover incident has no relation to what may result from negotiations for another tie-up with Boston.

It was fairly definite at the end of last season that Stover would not return to Mansfield.

BILLY EVANS, Boston's farm director, was greatly impressed by the managerial skill displayed by Stover, and indicated that the popular pilot deserved a promotion.

As the Georgia-Florida league is classified the same as the Ohio circuit, it might be difficult to explain Stover's new post as a promotion. However, it ictually is a promotion.

The southern league may be a Class D circuit, but it is considerable stronger than the Ohio organization.

This fact can be proven by the number of Georgia-Florida castoffs who had no trouble at all in making the grade in Mansfield. In fact, a number of the boys not considered good enough for that league were sensations in the Ohio circuit.

The job also carries a nice increase for Stover, who, in addition to receiving the highest salary of any Ohio State league pilot last year, was the recipient of a fat bonus presented to him by the Boston club in recognition of the fine job he did here.

ALTHOUGH Stover has not commented on his new job, we believe he will be well satisfied to assume the managerial reins at Moultrie. Dewey is sold on his employers, and we don't think he is particular where they send him just as long as he remains in the Boston system.

Moultrie will never regret his selection, we are positive.

Runs Wild On Indoor Track

Johnson Wins Straight Races, Also Heats.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Ben Johnson, who has injected new life into the indoor track season with his series of record-smashing sprint triumphs, goes to the mat with old man time twice more this week.

Johnson will be among the stars who will trek to Providence, R. I., Tuesday night for the annual meet of the Columbus club of the Knights of Columbus. Saturday night in the New York Athletic club meet, he will be back at Madison Square Garden and the track on which he twice broke the world's record for the 60-yard dash in the Millrose games

Johnson, the season's most consistent performer, has won nine straight races including heats. The Columbia captain won the Briggs 50-yard dash at the Boston A A. games Saturday night over a fast field which included Walker. The time was 5 5.

ACQUISITION OF HEMSLEY SEEN AS 10-STRIKE FOR CLEVELAND INDIANS

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK — (INS) — From Col. Jake Ruppert to the bat boy the Yankees are a unit today in declaring themselves a cinch to repeat for the American league pennant and the world series.

That opinion, however, is shared nowhere off Broadway. Elsewhere there may be those who will admit the Yankees should win again but even the most confirmed Yankee addict is loath to say the Yanks will have another walk-over.

In fact, for the first time in many years it appears probable the Yanks will have a real battle on their hands. Moreover, it is generally believed the American league will show better balance than it has in many seasons.

Even the St Louis Browns will be no pushover for any team. Gabby Street has got rid of most of his semi-pro pitchers and while the newcomers will never set the world afire, still they figure to give the opposition a battle now and then.

Connie Mack's youngsters also should show much improvement with a year of seasoning under their belt, and the Senators undoubtedly will be much more powerful than they were last season. The Red Sox, of course, are no set-ups at any time, but this year they may show more steadiness than they have heretofore.

Jimmy Dykes is confident his White Sox have added some strength where they needed it most and Mickey Cochrane expects to get better pitching to bolster the admitted power and run-making ability of his Tigers.

On paper, at least, the Indians at least appear to be going places. They have more good pitching than they can use and they have added strength in the one department where they really needed it, namely, their catching.

Getting Rollie Hemsley was a ten-strike. There is no better catcher in the country when he's on his good behavior and it may be that with a first division club and the allure of a possible pennant winner as an incentive, he may become the outstanding receiver of the game.

Yes, it even apears likely that the American league will be much closer and more hotly contested than the National league this year. For while the National league clubs spent the winter talking trades, the junior circuit stepped out and actually made them.

Ontario School Continues To Pile up Court Laurels

Defeats Union to Register Seventh Championship In Four Years.

A DISTRICT, three league and the same number of county tournament championships have been accumulated by the basketball representatives of Springfield township high school of Ontario in the last four years.

As their season is not over yet, the Warriors may present their school with additional basketball honors this year.

Cinch County Title.

The Ontario cagers registered the third of their three recent county league championships Saturday night when they closed their regular schedule with a home victory over Union.

Five of the seven championships annexed by the Ontario athletes were hung up in the last three years with Coach Orville Kibler at the helm.

In Kibler's first year at Ontario, the Warriors finished second in the county league, but won the tournament. They won the county league and tournament and district championships last year to become the first Richland county Class B team ever to advance to the state elimination.

Ontario suffered the misfortune of being paired with Upper Arlington, which won the state Class B state title, in the first game, and the defeat administered by the Columbus team was the only one on the record last season.

With the county league title in the bag, Ontario is now looking forward to the county tourney, which gets under wayat Mansfield high school Saturday night.

Tackles Madison.

Ontario's first foe is Madison, the only club to defeat the Warriors this season. Incidentally, the Madison defeat was the first administered by a county rival in 30 games.

Ontario is one of the favorites in this year's county elimination. Other teams possessing bright tournament title chances are Shiloh, Twin-Valley league champion, and Butler, second in the county race.

In addition to the Madison-Ontario-Madison game, the first round tournament games Saturday night will pit Lexington against Plymouth.

The county league race will be brought to a close this week, but the results will not effect the standings seriously. Madison, which has been forced to postpone two games because of the smallpox outbreak, is host to Lexington Tuesday. Butler is billed to play Bellville this week, but it is not known whether the game will be played Tuesday or Friday.

Matt Hager Stars.

Matt Hager, one of the individual scoring leaders in the county league, tallied 18 points as Ontario defeated Union, 36 to 9, to cinch the title.

Displaying their best form of the season, the Warriors limited Union to three baskets, and only three points in the second half. Bowser accounted for all of the Union field goals.

Coach Kibler used 11 players in the title-cinching triumph in which Ontario never trailed

Although held to five points in the first period, Ontario led 5-4 going into the second frame. It led 17-6 at the half and 26-9 at the end of the third quarter.

The Ontario reserves took the Union seconds into camp, 21 to 9.

QUALITY CLUB TO STAGE DOUBLE-HEADER TONIGHT

Montana Meets Stratton and Magyar Faces Ashby on Mat Bill.

Topped by a double-header main attraction, the weekly Quality club wrestling program will go on the Armory mat tonight at 8:30. Two bouts of the two-out-of-three-fall variety will bring four leading light-heavyweights into what promises to be an evening of fast action.

Joe Montana, the versatile but slightly "ruff-tuff" grappler from Camden, New Jersey, will be opposed to likeable Walter Stratton in the "piece de resistance." This melee has great possibilities, for the Leetonia farmer has signified he will wrestle the Italian any way the latter cares.

Joe Magyar, leading Hungarian matman, is slated to meet "Spike" Ashby of Portland, Oregon, returning here after an absence of two years, in the other featured attraction. The Hungarian has a remarkable record in Mansfield and will attempt to further it against a known "streak-buster."

The opening battle calls for action from Francis Steele, the Plymouth motor cop, and Bob Johnson, a newcomer from Kansas City.

Face Leaders Tuesday Night

South Main, Presbyterian to Encounter Troubie.

Whether any important changes will be made in the standings of the Class B Church league at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night depends on the South Main and First Presbyterian clubs. They face the two teams tied for the lead.

South Main tackles the Park Avenue Baptists in the first game at 7 p. m., and the Presbyterians engage the First Lutherans in the last tilt at 9 p. m.

In the other games, St. Johns meets First Christian, B'Nai Jacob meets Mayflower and First M. E. meets Central M. E.

GAINS WIDELY SCATTERED IN UPWARD JAUNT

Japan's Refusal to Reveal Naval Plans Shifts Interest to Armaments.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Steels led the stock market on an upward jaunt today.

Gains running to a point or so were widely distributed. Profit realizing cut down top marks here and there.

Armaments were the principal subject of discussion in boardrooms following Japan's refusal to reveal future battleship plans and the possibility was seen of the United States, as well as European powers, starting a naval building race.

There were a few bright spots in the business news. Oliver Farm turned in a cheering 1937 earnings statement and the stock advanced. Bonds and commodities were moderately uneven.

Holders of steels noted reports from mill centers that consumers were maintaining a "waiting policy" and limiting purchases to current requirements.

The fact most recent orders for the metal call for immediate delivery indicated to the magazine "Steel" that inventories were being cleared well. Steel ingot production for January, the publication said, was the lowest for that month in 20 years except for 1932 and 1933.

Railroads, it was added, were reluctant to fill their steel needs pending a decision on the plea for higher freight rates.

WAIT HITLER'S THIRD MOVE

ly to Vienna. The official news agency ventured no comment.

Various explanations of the situation by persons customarily described as well-informed contradicted one another. There were two main versions:

That Hitler is nervous about his army and is in the mood to seize opportunities for concillation with Austria—especially if they would facilitate negotiations with Britain on German demands for colonies.

That Hitler's army is stronger than ever since the shake-up which concentrated new power in his hands—and twice as dangerous—hence the willingness of Schuschnigg to climb the climb the steep hill to Hitler's Berchtesgaden villa.

(In Vienna it was said the Hitler-Schuschnigg talks strengthened Austria's position as the connecting, but still independent, link of the Rome-Berlin axis.)

HERE'S TIP ON NIGHT PARKING

Keep Your Tail Light Burning If You Don't Want Nice Little Traffic Tag.

that the hour of midnight is a favorite time for traffic tagging for "Offense No. 4." Those who have witnessed the event say that it is a common sight for three officers, armed with pad and pencil to start out from the station, at the beginning of the 12 to 8 shift, and make a tour of the whiteway district, issuing tags with incredible speed and finding the hunting pretty good. It's not often that a person who has parked there before midnight without a tail light will think to go turn on the lights at the stroke of 12. And thus, 373 tags have been issued in 12 days.

Chief Bates said that he had issued orders a week ago to all officers that more attention should be given to traffic violations because of the "flagrant disregard" of the city ordinances.

"There is no campaign, just a case of more vigilance on the part of the officers," he exlpained.

The city ordinance states that all cars parked on streets after dark must have a red light at the rear, visible for a distance of 200 feet, except in the whiteway district when all the lights are on.

At midnight a part of the whiteway system is turned out, making the tail light necessary after that hour.

"Tagging" has become almost a diversion among officers with beat men trying to outdo cruiser crews who have free roam of the entire city. Frequent reports of from 40 to 60 tickets for an individual officer are heard.

Records show that of the 788 tickets issued for traffic violations since Jan. 1, more than half of them or 373 were issued for the tail light violation in the past week.

A check of weekly traffic tag figures shows that five times as many tickets were issued last week as the week previous, while the 373 total was eight times the number given out during the week of Jan. 31.

ka, Hawaii and a small island here and there.

Bares Acute Interest.

The line of questioning in current hearings on the new naval bill showed acute if not unanimous congressional interest in Japan's ability to cope with the American fleet and with the chances our fleet would have against the combined sea forces of Japan, Italy and Germany. Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, said the American fleet could meet the Japanese fleet. But against three combined fleets, he said, the United States would be at serious disadvantage.

Appropriate in that connection is Admiral Leahy's unusual "off the record" remarks to the commitee which were passed over at the time by American reporters but which probably may as well be published now since a roomful of casual listeners heard his words as well as reporters for various foreign news organizations.

He said South America is exposed to possible foreign aggression and "may get into trouble at any moment." Questioned further about the United States, defense line—an imaginary line within which a foe would not be permitted to cross — Leahy said "it might be a good idea" to extend that line around South America instead of circling it through the Panama Canal as at present.

Forces Still Insufficient.

Even with the proposal naval increases, he continued, the United States could not conduct a successful defensive operation south of the Panama Canal. The admiral contended that nothing could stop seizure of a South or Central American country except maintenance of American naval strength sufficient to enforce the Monroe doctrine.

But whether the potential enemy is Japan or the Man in the Moon, the United States is about to undertake $2,000,000,000 of new spending for national defense. Most of it will be for marine insurance against war. The strictly warship costs will be $800,000,000 and for a merchant marine to serve commerce in peace and service the navy in war, this country must dig up $1,250,000,000 in the next 10 years — if adequate maritime standards are to be met.

The question before the house —and the senate and the nation —is whether the expenditure is wise and necessary and what foreign commitments, if any, accompany this tremendous expansion of American sea power.

Recall Chicago Speech.

President Roosevelt began the immediate controversy with two moves spaced more than three months apart. On Oct. 5 last year Mr Roosevelt, in a speech dedicating a bridge in Chicago, uttered the famous "quarantine" sentence remarking that the "epidemic of lawlessness is spreading."

"When an epidemic of physical disease starts to spread," he added, "the community approves and joins in a quarantine of the patients in order to protect the health of the community against the spread of the disease."

He said there would be no escape for the United States if the deluge came. He called for "positive endeavors to preserve peace" and insisted that peace-loving nations "must make a concerted effort in opposition to those violations of treaties and those ignoring of human instincts which today are creating a state of international anarchy and instability from which there is no escape through the mere isolation of neutrality."

That speech generally was recognized as directed against Italy for invasion of Ethiopia, against Italy and German for interference in Spain, and against Japan for invasion of China. Mr. Roosevelt followed it up last month with a crackling national defense message proposing authorization for increasing the navy's building program by 20 per cent at a cost of $800,000,000 and ultimate expenditure of $32,330,000 for other national defense improvements, including additional army aircraft, manufacture of gauges, dies and other technical aids to production of army munitions and experimental work with types of small war vessels newly developed the board, but I am highly in favor of such a measure. It would eliminate what has happened here in the past week and ease the tremendous load that has been thrown on health authorities at this time."

Robinson said he was heartily in accordance with the recommendation of the state department, and planned to submit the request to the county board at its meeting Feb. 25.

Two state health department doctors were still aiding in the fight to check the spread of the disease through immunization today, and were carrying on the vaccination campaign in the county schools. Health Commissioner Roy C Rehder said he hoped to be able to complete the county vaccination program today, and then return to the city schools, to check the results of the vaccination.

Assistant Commissioner Paul Baird and corps of nurses were still on duty giving vaccinations at city building.

The state doctors were expected to attend the regular meeting of the city health board tonight, but Dr Rehder said he did not know what might be taken up at the session concerning the smallpox situation

The eight new victims of smallpox over the week-end include Franklin Cummings, 8, third person to become ill in the family of Mrs. Nellie Cummings, Clairmont avenue; Theodore Au, 21, South Diamond road, second in the family, Leonard Danison, 44, 317 East Third street, Carl Haefli, jr., 12, R D. 6, Mansfield, an Ontario pupil; Albert Mulberry, 11, 18 North Adams street, student at Bushnell school; Claire Touby, 21, of 217 South Adams street; Arthur Gatton, 8, East Mansfield; Howard Brown, 28, of 204 Helen avenue.

DEATH CLAIMS 'ODD' M'INTYRE

have been set for Tuesday morning in Gallipolis, O., his boyhood home.

Native of Missouri.

Oscar Odd McIntyre—to give him the name few knew him by—was born in Plattsburg, Mo., on Feb 18, 1884, and he never forgot his birthplace. Time and again in his writings he referred to his corn-silk smoking back in Missouri.

His parents were Henry Bell and Fanny Young McIntyre. From Missouri the McIntyre family moved to Ohio.

Young Oscar Odd was educated in the common schools and Bartlett's college, Cincinnati.

Odd McIntyre's first newspaper job was that of reporter on the Gallipolis (Ohio) Journal. He held many other editorial positions in later years but he always had the heart, mind and inclinations of a reporter

Over and over again in his columns he referred to his reportorial duties on the Gallipolis paper. It was back in 1902, when he was a youth of 18 that he became a reporter.

Moved Steadily Upward.

From gathering local news on the Gallipolis Journal, McIntyre moved to the East Liverpool (Ohio) Tribune. There he was a "feature writer," and he made enough salary for him to marry.

His bride was Maybelle Hope Small of Gallipolis and they were married on Odd's 24th birthday.

The gangling young newspaperman moved steadily up the journalistic ladder He left East Liverpool to be political writer and later managing editor of the Dayton Herald. Next he joined the Cincinnati Post.

In 1912 he made his first magazine connection He was named associate editor of Hampton's.

New York became his goal, just as it has been the goal of countless newspapermen from all over the country.

He came to New York and became one of America's premier columnists He never left New York thereafter except on trips.

McIntyre's column, "New York Day By Day," which he began on a shoe-string, attained tremendous popularity, and soon was a syndicated feature in newspapers throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico.

"Odd's" Inventions.

The one-time small-city reporter invented such paragraph features in his column as "thoughts while strolling," the "diary," the "bagatelles," the "thingumbobs," the "add remembrances," the "purely personal piffle" and the "look-alikes"

Sophisticates of Manhattan and the tired farmer in the rural areas "ate up" McIntyre's stuff with equal relish. He carried on, in a manner of speaking, where O. Henry left off.

He drew his material from four sources, his memory, his reading, his observation and his mail. He received about 3,000 letters a week.

O. O.'s usual routine was to arise for breakfast at 10.30 a. m. Before starting his column he would draw the blinds of his workroom and turn on the lights.

He hated the sunlight as fervently as he disliked doctors. It is worth noting that neither were present when he died.

For years his job was to tell 15,000,000 people every day about life in New York. His column ran only about 800 words but it garnered a fortune for the one-time Gallipolis reporter.

Long before Walter Winchell and other columnists even thought of sitting down to a typewriter, O. O. was writing about Broadway. People loved his stuff because it had the homely touch. He gave his readers the impression he was still the mid-west "hay-seed" floundering around the big town with his mouth open.

He became a national institution

O. O. was the big town's No. 1 boulevardier—the rainbow-hued columnist.

In his younger days he was out to the theaters, restaurants and night clubs every night with Mrs McIntrye. His flashy wardrobe was the talk of the town. He loved colors. His shirts were something to gaze upon His collection of canes would feed a fireplace for a year

Of late, he rarely dined out and seldom attended a theater more than once a week.

He would take a drive in his town car at the sedate pace of 25 miles an hour—which was regulation back in Gallipolis. He didn't buy a car until 1928 He once wrote he felt "rather distinguished" because he seemed to be the only New Yorker who didn't own an automobile

He traveled abroad a great deal after getting his career firmly founded.

Odd McIntyre's column always was scrupulously clean It was fare for the entire family—never and double entendre in it.

Before he took an apartment on Park avenue he lived at the Ritz hotel for ten years. His favorite color was purple and his haberdashery startled more than one guest

All McIntyre's writing was done in red ink on paper bearing a red monogram.

He hated telephones and was afraid of poisons. He was really a shy fellow despite his peacock raiment. He would blush furiously when praised or when singled out for a microphone "hello." Without ostentation, he gave away thousands of dollars in charity to unfortunate Broadwayites.

McIntyre's body was removed to the Frank E Campbell mortuary on Broadway, where it will remain until shipped this evening to Gallipolis, Ohio, for burial. Funeral services have been set tentatively for Thursday morning in Gallipolis.

McIntyre Favorite With Mansfielders

Readers of The News-Journal have been familiar with "Odd" McIntyre's column, "New York Day by Day" for the past 15 years. It appeared at one time in the old News, and when the Journal began publication in 1930, it was a favored and outstanding feature. When the Journal took over the News in 1932, McIntyre's column was retained, and has appeared daily in The News-Journal since then on the editorial page.

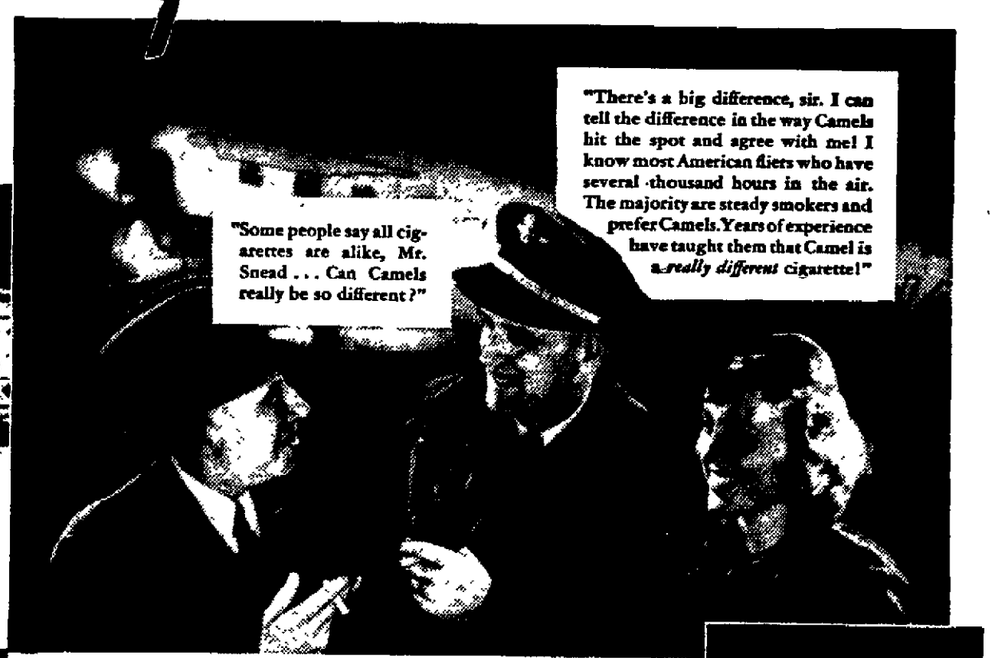
WHAT M.C. COBEN SAID TO HAROLD SNEAD, CHIEF PILOT OF TWA

"Do you find Camels really different from other cigarettes?"

Harold Snead gives his own answer—"Camels agree with me!" he says. And millions of other smokers agree with Pilot Snead, making Camels the largest-selling cigarette in America.

ON HIS SECOND MILLION MILES! Snead knows what he's talking about when he says: "In this line of work, healthy nerves are at a premium. I smoke—all I want. Camels don't get on my nerves."

A FEW of the instruments Snead has to watch. After a trip, Hal likes a Camel. "When I feel tired, I smoke a Camel the first chance I get," he says. "Yes, I get a 'lift' with a Camel."



"Some people say all cigarettes are alike, Mr. Snead . . . Can Camels really be so different?"
"There's a big difference, sir. I can tell the difference in the way Camels hit the spot and agree with me! I know most American fliers who have several thousand hours in the air. The majority are steady smokers and prefer Camels. Years of experience have taught them that Camel is a really different cigarette!"

DO PEOPLE APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAMELS?

CAMELS ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

AFTER THE BIG TWA SKYSLEEPER, above, was set down in Newark Airport, M. C. Coben was chatting with Hal Snead, chief pilot of the Eastern region, and Isabelle Judkins, air hostess, of Glendale, California. Hal pulled out his Camels and offered them around. And so they got to talking cigarettes!

ON DUTY, Isabelle is a perfect hostess! "I notice that most of the passengers on the TWA run prefer Camels," she says. "When conversation turns to cigarettes, the comment I often hear is, 'Camels agree with me.'"

Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS —Turkish and Domestic

A SWIM—then a "lift" with a Camel—and Isabelle Judkins' off-duty hours pass pleasantly. "What a difference I found in Camels!" she says. "No ragged nerves. No scratchy throat."

CHAPTER XXVIII

Not long before the supper hour, Terry had claimed her for a partner. During the noisy demand for an encore, Caradad heard a quiet voice over her shoulder: "May I present my respects? Sorry to be late."

"Oh, Mr. Severance! I was beginning to think you weren't coming. We're having such a beautiful time!"

"So it would appear—How are you Cantine?"

"Very well, thank you. Glad to see you." The two men shook hands. Caradad was quick to realize that Terry's voice carried a hint of formality. She also made a rapid mental comparison of the two. Very nearly of a size. And Severance looked well in evening clothes, too. He was not as handsome as Terry, she decided loyally. At the same time, she was forced to admit there was an indefinable air about him that Terry lacked. Terry was at his best in a gathering like this. Something made her know that Severance would maintain supremacy of manner and action anywhere—among wild animals, wild men. It must have taken a great many generations to produce him. And now, she had an opportunity to speak to him alone, for some one claimed Terry's attention.

"I'm not much for dancing any more—not these modern contortions, I mean," Severance explained, as the music started. "Mind sitting one out?"

"I'd be rather glad to rest a minute," Caradad told him fervently. "But I can't hide away, this time. And I'd like to. Really."

"I'm surprised." Severance offered her his arm and led her to a corner where he had spied two vacant chairs in the shelter of an oasis of artificial palms in green tubs.

"I suppose you feel quite at home in this tropical scene," Caradad suggested with a smile.

"Certainly. About as much as you do in the midst of these screeching Gold Coast savages. You're bored to death and trying to be a good sport about it. When I think you're aiming to achieve martyrdom among a colony of parasites, most of whom would desert you more quickly than they rallied around in the first place, it makes me wish we were back in the good old paleolithic days."

"Why?"

"Young women could be reasoned with then. One clouted them on the head with a neat stone hammer. Very effective."

"It must have been," Caradad agreed willingly. "And I make you think of that."

"You make me think of a good many things I shouldn't. Until you came along, I was able to attend to my own business in fairly good manner."

"I'm sorry I have such an effect on you."

"So am I," he admitted tersely."

Caradad was spared any rejoinder by the sudden appearance of Nick. "So there you are," he said, "hiding away with Sev, as usual. We're going in to supper right away—little ceremony first. Sev, you take Annie over in front of the orchestra platform and keep her until I find Terry and bring him to you. Step on it—there's a pal."

By the time Severance had escorted Caradad to the desired location, Tankersley was there with Terry. Nick scrambled to the platform and waved his hat with loud shouts of "Jadee-ees 'n' gentlemen!"

A spotlight cast its brilliance upon Terry and his embarrassed fiancee. Nick gave a signal and the full orchestra burst into Home on the Range. At the same time, a door near the stage opened and a girl, whose costume consisted mainly of a sombrero, boots and spurs, appeared leading a pony. The steed was a spotted Shetland, almost eclipsed by a big stock saddle. Tankersley leaped from the platform.

"Climb on, Annie, and lead the way! Terry, you steer the bronc . . . Sev and I will run ahead and throw glass balls into the air for you to break . . ."

He was interrupted by an outbreak of applause and appreciative screams. Caradad shrank against Terry in confusion "Better go head," he advised, under cover of the noise. Holding to the pommel of the saddle with both hands, Caradad suffered herself to be led to the supper room in state.

"Damme," Nick chuckled to the unappreciative Severance who stalked beside him, "I wish I'd thought to get a big doll for Annie. Dead ringer for The Flight Into Egypt . . . those two."

"At least, you wouldn't have had to scout around to find an ass," his friend growled.

"Always merry and bright. Never mind, you're sitting next to Annie at supper. Take a couple of drinks so you'll appreciate your luck."

Caradad was secretaly pleased with the seating arrangement that placed Terry on her right and Severance on her left. She tried to maneuver them into talking to each other, but her efforts were not particularly successful.

Caradad would not have been in the least surprised if he disappeared after supper, but he chose to remain. When she and Terry were saying good night to some of the guests, she found Severance at her side.

"My car is down front," he offered. "I'd be glad to drop you two at the Rushmore as I go past."

"Why, thanks!" Terry replied with unexpected cordiality.

The short drive was made almost in silence. Caradad sat between the two men, staring pensively ahead.

Gerta Greenway returned to Chicago after an absence of several weeks and, apparently, had been in town the better part of a week before she called at the Rushmore. Dad received her caller in the lobby.

"This is quite a surprise," she greeted Gerta smilingly, holding out her hand. "I thought you were still splashing in the waves."

"I really would like to be," Gerta assented languidly, leading the way to a nearby group of chairs. "As a vacation, my trip was not such a success . . . as a rest, I should say. I was continually meeting friends and making new acquaintances who kept me on the go. You know how it is."

For some reason, it was difficult to find anything to say to Gerta today. Caradad felt that there was one topic her caller wished to introduce but was skirting the edges warily.

"I was really thrilled at what I read about you—how you manage all your business interests yourself," Gerta said when the talk began to lag. "I'm simply appalled when I have to look at checkbook stubs—usually with good reason. I don't have any too much faith in human nature, but I'd simply have to trust my business affairs to others Tell me. Do you really enjoy it?"

"I think so. It was my father's wish that I look after things of the sort. The paper exaggerated somewhat. I do have help."

"Well, anyway, it's nothing short of marvelous. You must have been passing along some of your talents to Terry."

"Why?" Caradad asked quickly.

"Oh, just from what I hear. They tell me he has turned over a new leaf—a recluse socially—just business and nothing else. You should be very successful partners, I'm sure. Personally, I'm very glad to hear it. I've told you that Terry has been a sort of self-assumed problem of mine. I'm so glad that he is going ahead now—in more capable hands." She laughed lightly. "I think it is the mother in me. That is the only explanation."

Caradad was glad when Gerta changed the topic. Gerta had not said so, exactly, but she was leaving the impression that she had not seen Terry since her return. It was likely that Terry would have mentioned it, if he had met or heard from her. Caradad was glad when a bellboy announced that someone wished to speak to Miss Vardell on the telephone.

Terry seldom called her in the afternoon. He had planned to have dinner with Caradad tonight. Perhaps he was going to tell her that some business engagement would interfere. However, it proved to be John Severance.

Severance told Caradad that he wished to go out to the farm the following afternoon and hoped that she and Mr. Cantine could join him for an hour or two in the saddle. As it would be Saturday, Terry undoubtedly would be able to accompany them, he added.

"I'm almost certain Mr. Cantine will be able to go," Caradad said happily. "I will be glad to ask him for you, Mr. Severance. I expect to see him at dinner."

"Fine. By the way, Miss Caradad, you might find it pleasant to have another young woman with us. If you know of some one who enjoys riding, bring her along."

"Why, I'm not sure that I know of anyone. But we'll see. It's understood, isn't it, that I may ride 'Yoe'?"

"It's more than understood. It's settled. If I hear nothing to the contrary, I'll call for you about two."

Caradad was still smiling to herself at the prospect of another outing in the saddle when a thought struck her. It might be nice to ask Gerta to join the party. However, best to wait to see what Terry had to say.

"I might guess, from the way you look, who was calling you," Gerta told her with an amused smile. "That is real devotion."

"But it wasn't Terry," Caradad owned freely, thinking that Gerta would be surprised to know the truth.

"Oh, Dad, I was so disappointed at not being here for the rodeo party Nick gave for you. I've been hearing about it on every hand."

That seemed a safe subject and Caradad gave a sprightly account of the evening. "Some one was telling me that Mr. Severance was there, too."

"Oh, yes! He was there, stayed to the last and brought Terry and me here to the hotel."

"You are a marvelous child! You're making a real human being out of that man, I declare. I would have been as envious of you as all the other girls. And I really must be going—so very much to do. But I couldn't wait any longer to see you . . ."

That evening at dinner, Terry seemed in one of his abstracted moods. To Caradad's tactful inquiries he admitted that it had been rather a tiresome day. It seemed an opportune time to proffer Severance's invitation.

Terry did not seem overly enthusiastic about the trip. "Any invitation from that guy comes close to being a command performance," he admitted. "He could do me a lot of good, if he took the notion. We'd better take him up on it, if it suits you."

"Of course it does! Terry, Mr. Severance asked if there was some girl I'd like to bring along for company, some one who likes to ride. I've been wondering if Gerta would enjoy it. She rides, I suppose?"

"Sure. Used to do a lot of it, when Don was alive. I wouldn't wonder if she'd like it a lot. I know she would get a kick out of boasting she'd been a guest of Severance. Why don't you ask her?"

"I think I will. She was here this afternoon when Mr. Severance phoned, but I didn't mention it to her—wanted to be sure you would go."

"Sure. I'll go."

He had given no indication of surprise at hearing about Gerta's call, so he must have known she was home. At the moment, Terry was staring thoughtfully across the table.

"Dad," he offered abruptly, "there's something I'd like to know. It's really none of my affair, yet it will make a difference—about tomorrow. Will you let me ask you a question?"

Caradad sensed what it was going to be. "One question only," she specified.

"Was it Severance who told you about the jam I was in?"

"No. It wasn't he."

"Umm . . .mm. I'm glad it wasn't, but I'm still wondering about some things. Thanks, anyway."

"You're welcome. How would you like to come up to the suite for a while, smoke yur pipe and go home early? You look tired to death?"

"I'd like that better than anything I can think of." Terry's face brightened. Later, in Caradad's one big chair with his pipe drawing satisfactorily, Terry looked up at his hostess, who had insisted upon tucking a cushion behind his back. "I almost expect to see you bringing out my slippers next, Dad," he said.

"You're drawing on your imagination," she returned lightly.

"Maybe. But you are . . . restful." With an impulsive gesture, he reached out and took her hand. "Dad, what you did for me is still very wonderful . . . no matter what. But aside from that, I've missed an awful lot by letting you get away from me for so long. Things might have been different . . . for me."

Caradad's heart gave a curious throb at the touch of his hand. She stood motionless until his fingers loosened their hold and his hand fell away from hers.

"Now, you know I was tired tonight," he observed almost gruffly. "Tired enough to be—sappy."

Gerta was profuse in her expressions of delight at the invitation and appeared at the Rushmore looking particularly attractive in her riding things. "Very Piping Rock," Terry observed with a grin. Severance insisted upon his three guests occupying the deep rear seat of the touring car, while he accommodated his tall figure to one of the folding seats. He sat sidewise, with one arm over the back of his chair, so that he could converse easily with the others. He was more loquacious than usual, Caradad thought He directed many of his remarks to Gerta and she rewarded him with flattering attention to his every word.

They were less than a mile from the lane leading in to the farmhouse when a brown coupe roared past the long touring car, so close that Severance's chauffeur swerved quickly to the side of the road. Severance looked sharply at the speeding stranger, then sent a swift, searching glance down the road behind. He jerked forward, thrust his head between the two livered men on the front seat. His voice was tense, pitched too low for his guests to overhear.

"Jerry! Watch that car behind. If he tries to crowd you, don't let him. Step on it and never mind the lane."

His right hand made a swift motion in the direction of a door pocket.

"Tom—that coupe in front. If it stops, see that nobody gets out. Hold where you are, Jerry . . ."

FINDS 3 MORE ILL WITH T. B.

Clinic Tests Reveal 45 Negative Cases Out of 48 Examined.

Three new cases of tuberculosis have been found in Richland county, a report of the monthly diagnostic clinic held at the General hospital last Friday under the direction of Dr. T. L Bliss of Akron, disclosed today.

Of the 48 suspected cases examined, three showed positive tests while 45 proved negative.

Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, said that the three new cases brings to 10 the total number of cases diagnosed in the county since Jan. 1. Of the 86 patients examined by the clinic this year, 76 have shown negative tests.

Widow, Son and 2 Daughters Named In Will of Noted Richland Character.

The estate of the late Cyrus M Gatton, prominent Richland county farmer and one of the county's most colorful characters, goes to his two daughters and a son, under provisions of the will on file today in probate court.

The will specifies, however, that the widow, Mrs. Etta Gatton, is to have the use and income of the home near Bellville during her lifetime and is to receive $50 a month from the three children.

Mr Gatton, who died Feb 4 after a long illness, directed in his will that the children, Mrs. Nellie Wade, Miss Bessie Gatton, and Earl Gatton, shall share equally in the distribution of all real estate, farm implements and livestock belonging to his estate. Household goods are to remain the property of Mrs. Gatton, the widow, during her lifetime.

The will, which was drawn July 27, 1936, nominates the three children as executors of the estate No estimate of the value of the estate has been made.

Mr. Gatton, who died at the age of 74, was one of the pioneers in this section, and gained considerable fame as an entertainer and story teller.

'Y' CLASSES SET

2 Sessions Weekly to Be Held For Unemployed Members.

The Y. M. C. A., beginning tomorrow, will conduct two gym classes a week for "Y" members who are now unemployed, Ralph R. Chapman, general secretary, announced today.

The Y board has voted to continue all memberships of those who are now out of work, and to make no charge on memberships until these members start to work again, Chapman explained. This action also includes boys who have memberships and whose fathers are now out of work.

The special classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday of each week at 2 p. m., and will be under the supervision of Donald Cram, physical director. Establishment of these classes is made possible through the money received by the Y. M. C. A. through the Community Fund, Chapman added.

The Y. M. C. A. membership committee has set aside the last week of February as "booster week" at the "Y" during which the committee will seek new members.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 18

REDUCTION FOR BAD DEBTS

Bad debts constitute a considerable item in the returns of many taxpayers and may be treated in one of two ways—either by deduction from gross income in respect to debts ascertained to be worthless either in whole or in part, or by a deduction of a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts. Taxpayers were given an option for 1921 to select either of the two methods. The method used in the return for 1921 must be used in returns for subsequent years unless permission is granted by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to change to the other method. Application to change must be made at least 30 days prior to the close of the taxable year for which the change is to be effective.

However, a taxpayer filing a first return in 1937 may select either of the two methods, subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon examination of the return. Permission to adopt the reserve method is limited to taxpayers having a large number of accounts where credit is extended over a considerable period of time. It is not granted for the purpose of handling one specific debt.

What constitutes a "reasonable addition" to a reserve for bad debts must be determined in the light of the facts, and will vary as between classes of business and with conditions of business prosperity. It will depend primarily upon the total amount of debts outstanding as of the close of the taxable year, those arising currently as well as those arising in prior taxable years, and the total amount of the existing reserve. In case subsequent realizations upon outstanding debts prove to be more or less than estimated at the time of the creation of the existing reserve, the amount of the excess or inadequacy in the existing reserve should be reflected in the determination of the reasonable addition necessary in the taxable year.

A taxpayer using the reserve method should show in his return the volume of charge sales (or other business transactions) for the year, and the percentage of the reserve to such amount, the total amount of notes and accounts receivable at the beginning and end of the taxable year, and the total amount of the debts ascertained to be worthless and charged against the reserve during the taxable year.

Satisfy That Request For More Cookies

By IRENE OBERLIN
Home Service Department of the Ohio Public Service Company

For some weeks after the holidays most households shun sweets but perhaps, recently there has been a call for a fuller cookie jar and among the following recipes you may be able to choose one that your family will enjoy. This orange cookie recipe was given to me by a friend and is delicious.

Orange Cookies.

1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
3 eggs (well beaten)
1 cup sour cream
1 tsps soda—dash salt
1 tsps baking powder
1 orange—juice and grated rind
4 cups flour, or more if the orange is large
1 tbsp orange juice
1 tsps lemon juice
1 tsps brandy
1 Egg yolk

add confectionary sugar slowly—you will be able to judge a spreading consistency.

Cream the shortening and add the sugar gradually. Add the well beaten eggs. Then the sour cream. Then part of the flour in which you have sifted the soda and baking powder and then the orange juice and alternate until all the flour is mixed in Drop from a spoon and bake in a moderate oven 375° from 12 to 15 minutes.

Chocolate Cookies.

1 cup brown sugar
½ cup butter
½ cup sour cream
1 egg
Dash of salt
¼ tsps soda
1 tsps baking powder
2 sq melted choc.
½ cup nuts (if desired)
Icing
2 sq choc (melted)
1 tbsp butter
1 egg yolk
3 tbsp coffee (or more)
Enough confectionary sugar to spread nicely

Cream the butter, add the sugar—then the egg and beat in well—then the melted choc.—add the sour cream and then the dry ingredients. Add the nuts if you like. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes in a moderate oven, 350° to 375°.

Apple Sauce Cookies.

1 cup apple sauce (unsweetened.)
1 tsps soda
2 cups flour
½ tsps cinnamon
½ tsps nutmeg
⅛ tsps cloves
½ tsps salt
1 cup raisins
1 cup nuts (if desired)

Cream the shortening—add the sugar gradually—add the egg and the apple sauce into which the soda has been stirred. Sift the flour, spices and salt together. To this add the raisins and nuts Combine the mixtures and drop from a spoon Bake in a moderate oven 375° to 400° for 15 to 20 minutes. These may be baked in muffin tins if you like and frosted.

Drop Cookies.

¼ cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup apple butter
½ cup oatmeal
1 egg
1 cup flour
2 tbsp milk
½ tsp soda
½ tsps baking powder
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup seedless raisins
½ tsp salt

Cream the butter and sugar—add the egg—then oat meal and applebutter. Sift together the flour, salt, soda and baking powder—add to mixture a little at a time—add milk and nuts and raisins. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased cooky sheet and bake for 15 to 20 minutes at 350° to 375°

Chocolate Brownies.

¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
½ cup brown sugar
2 eggs (well beaten)
½ cup milk
2 sq. choc. (melted)
½ cup flour (all purpose)
½ tsps baking powder
¼ tsps salt
1 cup nut meats

Cream the shortening—add sugar and cream together—add the beaten eggs. Stir in the milk and add the melted chocolate. Then add all the dry ingredients and the nut meats Bake in a shallow pan, 9x13 inches and bake at 350° for 20 minutes—Remove from oven and cut in bars.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY CAKE
(Requires 3 eggs)

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup granulated sugar
3 egg yolks, well beaten
⅓ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
12 maraschino cherries
1 cup sweetened whipped cream

Sift flour once. Measure. Add baking powder and salt Sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly. Add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks and beat well. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time—beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased layer pans in moderate oven (375° F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Fold 12 chopped maraschino cherries into ½ cup sweetened, whipped cream and spread between layers Spread ½ cup sweetened, whipped cream on top of cake. Decorate with candy hatchets or maraschino cherry halves.

Moisten Popcorn

If popcorn does not pop easily it probably needs moisture. Place the corn in a strainer and run hot water through it for about a minute Shake the corn well. Then put it in the pan to be used in popping

Light-colored knitted woolen clothes require frequent launderings.

Hatchets To Bury

Cut your guests a slice of a cake like this and let them bury the hatchets for Washington's birthday.

Leftover stuffing is tastier if you reheat it and serve it with gravy or sauce Another good way to utilize it is to moisten it with milk or gravy, press it into a loaf pan or individual molds and bake it fifteen minutes. If molds are used, arrange the unmolded cakes to outline a platter of cold sliced fowl or meat. Serve a gravy or creamy sauce with it.

Often, after serving a platter of assorted cheeses, you have a few unappetizing--looking odds and ends left over. Wrap each kind separately in waxed paper, cover them and store them in the refrigerator. They will come in handy for salad, sandwich or canape mixtures or for dressing toast or crackers served with soups. Milder cheeses add a pleasing flavor to vegetable, meat or fish sauces.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1938.

Why have a 3-cent coin, when a nickel will buy three cents worth of almost anything?

The United States has more motor cars than bathtubs—but there's no apparent market for used bathtubs.

You may not even have noticed it—but for the first time since 1919 a month is passing with no full moon. It is understood, however, that this was accomplished without being made an administration measure.

Cheer Up, All Is Not Lost!

FOLLOWING a few months of what looked like "returning prosperity," a recession came along . . . industrial employment dropped . . . general business has not come up to hopes . . . there is much unemployment . . . things look dark . . . communists and Nazis contend they could do a much better job of running this country . . .

But—before giving up in despair and trading our democracy for any one of those glamorous but visionary foreign isms—have a look at the following figures, compiled by the London (England) Sphere, and you may conclude that we are not so badly off after all:

"The United States contains SIX per cent of the world's area and SEVEN per cent of its population.

"The United States normally consumes FORTY-EIGHT per cent of the world's coffee; FIFTY-THREE per cent of its tin; FIFTY-SIX per cent of its rubber; TWENTY-ONE per cent of its sugar; SEVENTY-TWO per cent of its silk; THIRTY-SIX per cent of its coal; FORTY-TWO per cent of its pigiron; FORTY-SEVEN per cent of its copper and SIXTY-NINE per cent of its crude petroleum.

"The United States operates SIXTY per cent of the world's telephone and telegraph facilities; owns EIGHTY per cent of the motor cars in use; operates THIRTY-THREE per cent of the railroads.

The United States produces SEVENTY per cent of the oil, SIXTY per cent of the wheat and cotton, FIFTY per cent of the copper and pigiron and FORTY per cent of the lead and coal output of the globe.

"The United States possesses about eleven billion dollars in gold, or NEARLY HALF OF THE WORLD'S MONETARY METAL. It has TWO-THIRDS of civilization's banking resources.

"THE PURCHASING POWER OF THE POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES IS GREATER THAN THAT OF FIVE HUNDRED MILLION PEOPLE IN EUROPE AND MUCH LARGER THAN THAT OF THE MORE THAN A BILLION ASIATICS.

"Responsible leadership which cannot translate such a bulging economy into assured prosperity is destitute of capacity.

"But pompous statesmen, looking over the estate, solemnly declare that the methods by which it was created are all wrong, ought to be abandoned, must be discarded—that the time has come to substitute political management for individual initiative and supervision.

"There is only one way to characterize that proposal—it is just FOOLISHNESS."

Maybe it would be a good idea to clip and save the above figures—or to pass them along to some misinformed malcontent whose fuzzy brain has seized upon an alien doctrine that he thinks is better than the American system.

These figures were included in an address by Governor Albert B. Chandler, of Kentucky, at a recent convention of newspaper men in Columbus.

Lesson Seen In History.

FATE does to nations what they do to other nations. The taker is taken and the slayer is slain. This seems to be the philosophical conclusion of Dr. Herbert J. Spinden, expert in primitive cultures at the Brooklyn museum in New York.

He gives the ancient Medes and Persians as examples. They adopted the practice of raiding other nations. Thus they impoverished their neighbors, neglected to build up an organic prosperity in their own countries, and eventually perished from internal strife and poverty.

An Oriental might explain such retribution by the Buddhist law of Karma, which is supposed to work for justice by making individuals or nations suffer in like manner for the evil they have inflicted on others. A devotee of any religion might explain it as the divine penalty for evil-doing.

An American economist would take the matter out of the realm of religion or morality and explain it simply as economic cause and effect. It is bad economics to damage neighboring nations' productive power and destroy or alienate their trade.

More About College Ballyhoo.

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION which, a few years ago, gave American colleges a good talking to about the evils of the subsidized football team, resumed the scolding the other day. This time it charges that the colleges are competing, disastrously so far as true education is concerned, in other fields to entice students.

Drum majors and tuba players, high school tenors, potential crooners, orators and amateur ventriloquists, are considered highly desirable because they attract attention to the college or university. Campus morale, alumni support, big donors, must be won by numbers, and students must be attracted by publicity. A drop in attendance is considered a weakness, regardless of the educational standards maintained. High pressure salesmanship is used—just to keep enrollment up.

The Carnegie report lends additional interest to an address made by President Dodds of Princeton.

"We have put our trust in diplomas," he said, "and have attached to them unmerited monetary importance. We have created an artificial bull market in education which is endangering the true values of the liberal arts idea."

Indianapolis reports that less soot fell in that city during December than in November—thus giving the white collar worker a break.

There's an idea that aircraft will soon be propelled by hot air—which makes it sound like a government project.

Alignment Shows Preference For Democracy

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Lined up threateningly against one another, we read every day or oftener, are the world's big democracies versus the world's big despotisms.

Democracies:

The United States, Britain and France.

Despotisms:

Germany, Italy and Japan.

Three-to-three—a tie!

Of course, it is not really a tie, for the democratic group is tremendously more potential than despotism's. Still, it is a numerical tie. Moreover, the despotic trio is equal to making a lot of trouble.

NOT EMPHASIZED

All this is common newspaper talk.

It is not so frequently emphasized, however, what a perfectly enormous casting vote is outstanding between democracy and despotism.

Russia's vote!

On the face of everything, it should be a despotic vote. Paradoxically, it is democratic.

BROUGHT OUT IN LECTURE

This peculiar contradiction recently was brought out by Professor Edwin Borchard of the Yale law school, in a "Bronson Cutting Memorial lecture" at Constitution hall, in Washington.

It is, indeed, obvious that the Soviets must be on the present side of the democratic powers, because Japan and Germany, at least, if not Italy, so manifestly are their enemies. Regardless of their political sympathies, the Soviet interests of today clearly are with the democratic alignment.

But, strange to relate, Russia generally has been internationally democratic.

PRIOR TO WORLD WAR

Professor Borchard points out that the Muscovites were with the democratic group at the beginning of the World war.

Autocratic Austria tried to bulldoze the somewhat uncivilized but relatively democratic Balkans. The democratic nations objected. There was more to it than that, to be sure, but that was how the row started—democracy resisting the spread of despotism.

And Russia was with the democratic aggregation. I doubt that it was with an overly good motive, but it was on the democratic side, anyway.

IN CIVIL WAR DAYS

That was not the first time, either.

Go back a much longer while—to American Civil war days!

I do not want to start a controversy with any southern reader by intimating that the north was on the democratic and that Dixieland was on the despotic side of that rumpus.

Nevertheless, it is of historical record that Britain favored a smash-up of the "states." It was a situation in which the British were, not exactly pro-despotic, yet certainly they chortled at the prospect of the disintegration of this particular democracy. In the circumstances maybe it was natural for them to do so.

Here again Russia lent aid to the preservation of democratic principles.

RUSSIA'S AID TO U. S.

The British did more than chortle.

In Dixie's behalf, they did a deal of blockade running. The north came pretty close to going to war with them over it.

In the midst of the muss czarist Russia sent a big cruiser fleet to northern American waters—most conspicuously as a friendly gesture to the north and as a plain hint to Britain to keep out of New World democracy's little internal quarrel.

Or else!—

AND NAPOLEON—

Still farther back!

Napoleon was a would-be despot—assuredly as much so as Hitler or Mussolini.

The democratic peoples thought so, anyway.

Russia clacked HIS back.

AS STEWART SEES IT

Russia has been bawled out so much that it is a novelty, if only that, to hear a kindly word said for her by a spokesman like Professor Borchard.

She had a perfectly awful czarist government.

Her revolituon's horrors shocked humanity.

Stories of her communist regime sound as bad as anything in the czar's era.

IN-ternally apparently she is despotic up to the "nth" power.

Why is it that, EX-ternally, she happens so persistently, heemingly by pure accident, to be with the democracies?

What It Means:

Government In Business.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY

WASHINGTON—The easiest way to make sense out of the latest act of congress and of recent constitutional decisions of federal courts is to ignore the political fog for the moment and take a cash-register view. What actually is happening is this:

The federal government is making strides into economic territory that has been reserved for private citizens and corporations.

No Gobbling.

THIS does not mean state socialism or communism is just around the corner. Nor does it imply that the federal government is going to gobble private business.

So far, the government has given to the public services which the Supreme Court says are "affected with the public interest," or it has gone into business fields that are not profitable for private companies.

Take the latest law—the bill to revise the federal housing act of 1934.

What the revised law does is to shove the government deeper into the mortgage insurance business. The government expects to lose some money. It already has lost six odd millions of dollars in this field, a little more than 1 per cent of its "investment." That's because its terms are liberal. But Uncle Sam is willing to take a comparatively small rap on the chin in hope that the bill will encourage building and thereby get heavy industries going. That would give employment to more people and spread profits among private citizens.

Can't Be Bothered.

NOW turn to the Supreme Court's January decision upholding the constitutional right of the federal government to lend, or give, money to cities for power plants, public buildings, sewer systems and the like.

The real meaning of that is that Uncle Sam can't be bothered about the survival or death of a private enterprise, so long as he is giving the public a legitimate service.

Couple with that decision, the lower court ruling that approved the Tennessee Valley Authority—one of the biggest real estate developments launched anywhere. That decision okeyed the whole scheme, including the right of the government to produce and sell water power in the valley.

The meaning of the lower court decision is substantially the same as that of the Supreme Court, although, because it approved the whole Tennessee project, it is much broader.

This does not imply that the government is going to supply all the electric current in the nation any time soon, if ever. The government only controls 15 per cent of potential water power sites anyway.

A Governmental Trend.

NEVERTHELESS the enlarging powers of the government to go into business other than such fundamental activities as national defense, the courts, and law-making, is a clear reflection on the trend of the times. This is the way the Hoover committee on social trends put it, back in 1933:

"It is conceivable that without any surrender of our belief in the merits of private property, individual enterprise, and self-help, the American people will press toward a larger measure of public control to promote the common welfare. One possibility is the further extension of the list of public utilities . . ."

That committee also saw an advantage in the democratic form of government to carry out social aims, "with less lag between social change and governmental adaption."

The government's action in regard to mortgage insurance and public utilities demonstrates a trend toward the course seen by that committee. And that is the only trend disclosed by Congress or the courts since the special session of congress began last November 15.

How About Flaming Parents?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

ANOTHER blast against Pop and Mom! Thank heaven, most of them don't rate it. But how it'll burn those who do! So more power—sez I—to 18-year-old Clyde Dwight Shaw, of Denver, Colo.

Dear Miss Robinson—

"They call us FLAMING YOUTH—huh, that's a laugh. FLAMING PARENTS—that fits better.

"They tell us that it isn't good for us to smoke—And then light up a cigaret and blow the smoke in our face.

"They tell us never to come home with liquor smelling on OUR breath——And then they throw a beer party that night.

"They tell us never to go to the so called "honkytonks"—And then flip a coin to see which one they are going to tomorrow night.

"They tell us to be in no later than 1 A. M.—And then THEY come dragging in about 3 A. M.

"They tell us that the burlesque is too filthy for anyone to see—And then call up to see if they can reserve a seat for Saturday night.

"They let us use their automobile once in awhile and tell us not to speed—And then wonder where they are going to get the money to pay their second or third speeding ticket.

"They wonder what the younger generation is coming to—And they have cause to wonder, with the example they are setting.

"FLAMING YOUTH? No! Just human beings who are curious to find out about things which seem to so please our parents.

"They call us FLAMING YOUTH—huh, that's a laugh. FLAMING PARENTS—that fits better."

Clyde Dwight Shaw—age 18

Hot stuff, youngster! But you'd better save that barrage and see how you feel about it yourself when YOU'RE A POP!

* * *

AND now another Tear Bomb—SHOULD WE SOAK THE RICH? Is a man a Public Enemy simply because he's saved his pennies? Hazel Daniels of Denver, Colo., has ideas.

"DO YOU RESENT THE OTHER FELLOW'S PAY CHECK?

"Soak the rich! How often have you heard that phrase uttered from almost everyone you've ever met? Sounds particularly good to the average man working eight to fifteen hours a day for anywhere from fifty dollars a month to that same amount each week. 'Why not take the money from those who have plenty and give us poor devils some of it? Lord knows we work hard enough for what we do get. In fact, why not distribute the rich man's money evenly among all the 'underprivileged'? Then everybody would have as much as everyone else, and we could all start out even!'

"You think that would be fine, do you? But that's where you're wrong. Dead wrong. For without the rich, where would business be? Who would put up the money to start factories and business of all kinds going, back new businesses? Take your store owner's money away from him and you take it out of your own mouth. And that's a fact.

"On the other hand, how did the rich get their riches? Certainly it was no manna from heaven. True enough—some lucky person inherits money almost every day. But where did it come from in the first place? Someone had to earn it. Earn it by working a little harder, being a little more ambitious, absorbing every scrap of information he could get his hands on—sacrificing and struggling—TO WHERE HE IS NOW.

"SOAK THE RICH! Why haven't we their luck? Simply because we're too darned lazy or self-indulgent or cowardly to follow their example. If instead of 'soaking the rich' you'd junk some of your own self-pity, and get busy, you'd have some of that 'luck' which you envy the other fellow."

Mrs. Hazel Daniels—age 22
Denver, Colo.
($10 prize winner)

That's a gob of the good Old American common sense, sister. Come again soon; we need spunk like that.

LAST comes 17-year-old Helen Stritzinger of New Castle, Pa., dishing it out to The Younger Crowd—and how. Go to it, little girl.

"Dear Miss Robinson—

"Many high school students are forever grumbling about their night work, their tough tests and their mean teachers. But if we, as students, cannot undergo the small tests and hardships of our high school days, how do we expect to fight and overcome the battles of life? If we grumble now about such trivial matters, then we'll always be grumbling in life.

"Our high school days are only preparing us for what we must face later on. The teachers, the tests and the night work are only examples of the obstacles we will meet in life, gradually getting harder. If we cannot face them now, we cannot expect to face life with a grin and a wallop.

"Opportunity will soon knock! Grab while the grabbing is good, and prepare yourself in such a manner that when you graduate you can face life with a big hearty smile written across your face for victory—not a good, hardy cry."

Restrictions on Photographers.

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — News photographers had their first taste recently of a freshly enacted military secrets law and it brought them up with such a start as to strain every bolt in their mechanism.

The law was enacted in the first days of the present session under urging of the army and navy.

It had little publicity at the time and has had little since. It provides simply that it is unlawful to make any photograph, sketch, picture, drawing, map or geographical representation of vital military or naval installations or equipment without official permission.

The president is given authority to designate forts, areas or "equipment" which may not be photographed, or drawn, or etc. The law applies with equal force to amateurs snapping their cameras around on a sunny Sunday afternoon.

It is common sense, of course, to protect secret fortifications and secret designs or equipment from prying alien eyes. But this new law settled down as a strange piece of harness on the free-ranging photographers, some of whom were frankly suspicious it might broaden into some kind of censorship. Others complained they had no way of knowing when they were violating a law.

There's a Penalty.

THE law was brought into play in connection with the crash of an army plane at Dayton, Ohio. As is frequently the case, the photographers had the picture before the army gots its regulations into action, even though the plane crashed only 400 yards from Wright Field military reservation.

In times past photographers have found the army and navy decidedly on the "play safe" side in handling such matters, although as a rule there isn't much controversy between the cameramen and the men in uniform.

Yet where before there was no specific penalty, the new law makes everything different. It isn't necessary to prove that the photographer has a traitorous motive. If his photograph happens to include a bit of restricted terrain or a plane or ship whose design is to be protected, he can be fined $1,000 or jailed for a year on conviction.

An executive officer at Wright Field told photographers that publication of the crash picture might cost them $1,000. It stopped the picture dead for two hours. Photographic organizations went straight to the head of the army with a protest and the picture was released.

Photographers, while as conscientious as the next man about avoiding disclosure of military secrets, suspected they might be hauled into court for innocently photographing restricted subjects. To avoid this, the navy and army have agreed to ask the president to list subjects which must be handled with caution.

Law Long Sought.

THE military wing has been seeking a restrictive law for many years, but has been held off by fears of congress that regulations prohibiting flying over various "strategic areas" might jumble up the commercial air lanes. Recent activity of Japanese agents in this country was the impulse which finally put it over.

Actually the United States is far behind other nations in the designation of "restricted areas," although there seems to be a general agreement among nations to avoid flying over each others' forts and defense works. Such restrictions make flying Europe a ticklish job since virtually every frontier is a restricted area where flying is prohibited.

The president recently put a "don't fly over me" sign on the southwest section adjacent to the Mexican border and a good guess is that many coast defense forts and experimental fields soon will be added to the list. And the act may reach out to include naval vessels and flying craft, even when off military reserves.

Timely Editorial

Nature Pronounces Sentence.

Al Capone has been front page news for a decade. The country has watched him rise to a power that once seemed almost without limit, a despot of the underworld, who ruled Chicago with an iron fist and a relentless trigger finger. It has seen him shorn of his power, shorn of his $25 silk shirts, and sent to a felon's cell in Alcatraz.

Now the once swaggering monarch of the underworld has been overtaken by a slower but more merciless justice than ever was conceived by man. The master mind, which once plotted and schemed and mercilessly sent men to death, totters under the onslaught of paresis.

Those who are fighting for the suppression of social diseases are here provided with a startling example of the far-reaching effects of syphilis. Paresis, a by-product of this dread disease, insidiously attacks the brain cells, both crazing and paralyzing the victim. It is fortunate that Capone is safely away where his maniacal moods will endanger no one.

Capone has received a sentence from which there can be no appeal.—Ohio State Journal.

WORDS OF THE WISE

Character is what you are in the dark.—Dwight L. Moody.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

DIARY: Betimes and found Faith Baldwin's latest tome autographed. And a hail from Roy Howard at Waikiki and Gene Fowler sent on his mock treatise for the hangover the most hilarious ribaldry ever I read. Then palvering with Ward Morehouse about his recent stop-over in Gallipolis.

My wife and cousin Josephine flicked me into visiting a gallery to see some canvasses of Seine bridges but while they prowled I slipped over to Steffin, the haberdasher, and articled for a splashy tie of red, purple and white and fell to gazing upon skaters dashing about in the Radio City pit.

Major Bowes to a home dinner of sauer-kraut and spare ribs and struck by the likeness of young Bill Rogers to his father. Even to the unruly forelock. So they to the theater and we to a public nodding to Gilbert Miller, Countess di Frasso and Col. Blethen, the Seattle publisher, and Mrs. Blethen.

Dr. Carleton McCulloch, who was James Whitcomb Riley's physician, in commenting upon my recent choice of Riley's "When the Frost is on the Punkin" as the most thoroughly American poem, provides a revealing paragraph about the beloved Hoosier poet. Says he: "How he used to dread October. He'd say, 'I suppose I've got to go downtown this morning and some jackass is bound to jab me in the ribs with his elbow and cackle, "The frost is on the punkin vine, Mr. Riley—he, he, he, he!" Then I've got to appear surprised, tickled and laugh heartily and pretend it's something new and witty. While all the time I want to slap his ears down, first for working off an old annual joke, and secondly for misquoting me. I never used the word vine. I stopped after punkin'."

Very often a supreme achievement bedevils an artist in the manner of Riley's "When the frost is on the punkin." DeWolf Hopper was never able to get away from reciting "Casey at the Bat" although he regarded it as a minor achievement. He recited it thousands of times and no matter how he tried to avoid it, there was no stilling the applause until he did it again for an encore. In a lesser way, Bert Wheeler, of vaudeville and movies, has always failed to duck his classic about the soused mouse and the cat, at parties.

Damon Runyon was the first fictioneer to capitalize the jargon of the 4 o'clock in the afternoon breakfast boys. It proved a vein of highly salable comedy. Runyon changed the Lindy locale to a place called Mindy's. More than any other observer of the Broadway beatitudes he caught the colorings and nuances of the present tense conversationalists. Such as this: "I'm standing in front of the Palace and Joe comes along and we aukles to Mindy's, etc." That may sound like drawing the long bow, but that is precisely the way the toil-and-spun-not lads talk.

Grover Whalen, Big Shot of the World's Fair as well as a scoop for Esquire, is already proving something for the front showcase, sartorially. I get a preview of his wardrobe effects as he bowls through the park in his open car these nippy mid-mornings. No one can tamp on a silk hat with such jauntiness or make a boutonniere stand out so sharply. His spats are as flawless as the loop to his cravat. His spruceness gives the impression of super-valeting, but the fact he is one of those fortunates who has a way with clothes. Irene Castle in her dancing days was that way in the feminine division. Whatever she wore appeared suddenly smart.

Carolyn Wells is absorbed by the anacrostics, alias double crostics. It's like a fever she can't stop. Daily when she should be at her typewriter she is feasting on strange words—waiting to use such as salterello, alsitonane, prosiliency, librate and intimity. Incidentally she has never found anyone save the manufacturer who knows what a shook is. That's a barrel taken apart and packed for shipping.

'SHOWDOWN' ON WAR PROFITS BILL PLANNED

Military Committee Chairman to Seek Final Vote While Opponents Blast Away.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A fresh attack on the administration's plan to legislate the profits out of war, today drew from Chairman Andrew May of the house military affairs committee, a decision to force a showdown on the proposal tomorrow.

While opposing members have twice succeeded in keeping the revised Sheppard-Hill bill bottled up in committee, May announced he will put the measure to a final vote in an effort to report it to the house.

His assertion came to the house liberal bloc leveled another blast at the revised bill, 'branding it a "betrayal of the veterans' hopes" to eliminate profiteering in time of war. The original Sheppard-Hill measure had the endorsement of the American Legion.

Veterans Lead Attack.

The attack was made by two house veterans of the World war, Rep. Maverick (D) of Texas, leader of the bloc and a member of the military affairs committee, and Rep. Izac (D) of California, chairman of the bloc's committee on national defense

"In the first place," their statement said, "this bill does not take the profits out of war as the veterans had hoped It, furthermore, is a surrender by congress—in advance of war — to a dictatorship.

"It claims to prevent profiteering and to equalize the burdens of war—and it does neither. It claims to provide for national defense and in no way does so. It contains no legislative guarantees against profiteering, but only expresses the pious hope that some dictator-president and his secretary of the treasury will limit profits to a 'fair, normal return' on investment."

The liberal bloc is waging a bitter fight against the bill because a provision to impose a flat 95 per cent tax on war profits has been eliminated, and a plan calling on the treasury department to make a continuing study of tax system for war times substituted.

Maverick heads a group within the military committee battling to restore the taxing provision Another group led by Rep Short (R) of Missouri, a committee member, objects to a new provision exempting labor from the universal service, or conscription clause, for massing men and materials for war.

"I am confident that the committee will approve and report the bill when it meets tomorrow," May said. "Is this an administration bill? Well, we have twice written department heads of the state, war, navy and commerce departments for their opinions, and since none have replied, we assume it is"

Mere Absence of Doubt Not Faith, Youth Forum Told

"Facing With Christ the Mood of Doubt," was the subject discussed by Dr. Frank H Caldwell, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, Louisville, Ky., at a meeting of the Christian Youth Forum last evening at the Central Methodist church.

"Doubts are normal and profitable when they represent a stage in the development of the person," Dr. Caldwell said. "The mere absence of doubt is not faith, and the acceptance of Christ is the way that leads to the most adventurous life youth can experience. Faith is not merely a matter of the mind, but rather of the whole person."

Music during the meeting was furnished by the John Simpson Junior high school band under the direction of Lawrence S. Frank, instructor of music at the school Esther Jenkins was the devotional leader.

The next meeting of the Forum will be held Sunday evening at the First Congregational church. Dr. Sharpe of Washington, D C., former coach of football, basketball and baseball at Yale, Cornell and Washington universities, and at present a field executive of the American Red Cross, will speak.

READERS IN McINTYRE'S HOME TOWN KEPT DICTIONARY HANDY

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Whatever the rest of the world thought of Odd McIntyre, who died today in New York, the town which claimed him, Gallipolis, O., remembered him above all else for his use of big words.

Dr. John B. Alcorn, who was Maybelle Hope Small's family physician before she was married to the noted columnist and who knew "Odd" during his first days as a reporter, said today that he had to keep a dictionary handy when reading McIntyre's stories and even his personal items on the society page.

"Some people thought he was a showoff," Dr. Alcorn said, "but they had to admit he certainly knew his words."

"That was remarkable, too," Dr. Alcorn added, "for he hated to go to school. I don't think he learned much in school, but he kept a dictionary handy and we who read the paper had to keep one handy too."

Dr. Alcorn described McIntyre as "crazy about newspaper work, but other wise normal."

"He joined the rest of the boys who loafed in the Park Central hotel and in the village park where they met their girl friends, but Odd never had but one sweetheart. Maybelle Small was his first and last girl.

"I don't know what to tell you about his boyhood because he has covered that so thoroughly in his articles. Everything he ever wrote about himself was true. He had too many friends who liked to kid him about his errors to write otherwise".

Dr. Alcorn said he thought McIntyre's most outstanding characteristic was his keen memory of the small things which happened in Gallipolis.

"Not long ago," he said, "Odd wrote and reminded me of the time my son hitched his little wagon on behind a hearse in a funeral procession. I had forgotten the incident long ago."

The writer seldom came back to his home town, but frequently visited at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Martindill, of Chesapeake, O., about 45 miles down the Ohio river from his home Mrs. Martindill is a sister of Mrs. McIntyre.

Dr Alcorn described McIntyre as "one of the gang but never a leader." He was a member of the Tuxedo club, organized by the young men of the town to give parties and dances, but he was never a social leader, Dr. Alcorn said.

A Farmer's Diary

Feb. 13.

ALL DAY the wind blew from the south with a warmth like that of early May. The fire was out, the doors were open, and no one cared to remain indoors.

I took my morning jaunt over the same trail as that one week ago. It seemed some invisible hand had shifted the scenery. The wheat field which had worn a hint of seared green was now a velvety turf; the pasture in the valley had a tender, luscious, verdancy that I could almost taste.

The little stream gurgled and sang its soft liquid notes. The crows, hunting food, flew zigzag about the open field, cawing as jubilantly as they could that spring was here. The song sparrow perched on shrub and fence post, sang wild with glee as though his throat would burst. The robin's cheerful tune was heard from higher trees and telephone wires. Just before I reached the secluded spring I loved so well, I heard frogs croaking along its green banks. To go on farther would be to invite silence from those marshy beds.

The sun shone bright and warm Long white clouds, as soft as down, hung in streaks across the blue. It was a laughing sky.

INDICATES JAPS MIGHT YET BARE PLANS FOR NAVY

Spokesman Says Informal, Not Written Requests, Facing Answer Possibilities.

(By United Press)

TOKYO—A foreign office spokesman hinted today that Japan might be willing later to divulge her naval building program provided that interested nations made informal inquiries of seeking them by written notes.

The spokesman, discussing Japan's refusal to comply with requests in American, British and French notes for details of Japan's navy program, suggested that in his own unofficial inquiries would be better than formal requests.

Gets Veiled Promise.

He did not actually propose such a course but said that a "certain foreign diplomat" had unofficially made overtures and indicated the possibility that the information he asked might later be given, whereas compliance would have been impossible had he asked through formal channels

Further questioning of officials revealed a considerable thought that Japan's answer to the three-power inquiries might have been different if different methods had been used.

Officials said the door had not been completely closed by Japan's reply. But they said there was no doubt that the American, British and French notes had stiffened the Japanese navy's attitude against revealing information.

Hence, it was said, it probably would be necessary to allow some time to pass before the moment was opportune for a fresh approach There was some feeling that the foreign office spokesman's hint was thrown out as a sort of feeler, to test foreign reaction and gain time during which the government might watch developments

In his talk the foreign office spokesman said that he himself felt that complete abolition of battleships, in which Japan might join, would be the best guarantee of world peace.

RALLY FOR LAST FARM BILL TIFF

Senate Foes Place Hope For Bill's Defeat on Borah and Burke Speeches.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Senate foes of the compromise farm bill made one more attempt today to block its enactment, but acknowledged their chances of success were slight.

Their only hope, they said, lay in speeches by such senators as Borah (R.-Idaho), Johnson (R.-Calif.), and Burke (D.-Neb.) before the final vote was taken (at 3:30 p. m.).

Supporters of the crop control legislation were confident of victory because a proposal to send it back to a joint committee for revision was defeated Friday, 48 to 31. The house already had passed it.

The bill, which sponsors forecast would be signed promptly by President Roosevelt, would continue the present soil conservation program and also establish marketing quotas for major crops when supplies reached certain points. Farmers would have to approve or reject the quotas.

A host of other pressing legislative subjects was ready to take its place. One was the president's recommendation for a $250,000,000 emergency relief fund. The house probably will consider it tomorrow, an appropriations subcommittee having approved the bill Saturday night.

Another principal topic was the administration's proposed $800,000,000 expansion of the navy.

TOWN HALL TO SEE NEED FOR PARK PROJECT

Movies at Session Thursday to Show Poor Condition of Recreation Centers.

Moving pictures showing the run-down condition of some of the city parks will feature the Town Hall meeting Thursday night that will be devoted to the discussion of parks and city beautification. Town Hall meets in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room in the Farmers bank building.

The meeting was originally set for Wednesday evening but due to conflicting gatherings it has been moved back to Thursday, Paul W. Williams secretary-manager of the chamber said.

G. V. Sowers, chairman of the C. of C. parks and beautification committee will lead the discussion on beautifying unsightly spots in Mansfield.

Outline WPA Project.

Town Hall is taking up the problem with the hope of enlisting the support of various civic groups and clubs in a campaign the "beautify" the city, the chamber pointed out. Williams said the moving pictures taken recently in the parks will be shown in connection with an outline of a WPA city parks project calling for the expenditure of $25,000, largely WPA funds

The plans include cleaning out dead trees, beautifying unsightly spots, building stone walks and ramps through the parks and over the embankments to the streets, improving the roadways, tearing down all unattractive buildings, and installing equipment to make the parks practical for outdoor recreation centers.

The proposal calls for approximately $19,000 in WPA funds and $6,000 in city funds and would provide work for 80 men for a period of four months.

The project has been approved by the district WPA office and is awaiting an appropriation from city council before it will go to Washington for final approval.

Thursday's meeting will be open at 7:30 p. m.

"Interest in this winter sport is increasing not only in Mansfield but in other sections of the country," Mr. Meder says. "The ranks of the new bowlers includes men, women and boys and girls of high school age. In Mansfield, bowling is becoming popular particularly with the younger element."

Mr. Meder offers instructions during the afternoons to beginners.

He cited estimated entry lists for this year's A. B. C. and Intercity tournaments as an indication of the growth of the game.

"Last year about 4,000 five-man teams took part in the national tournament in New York and some bowlers thought the peak had been reached," he said. "Now we have word from Chicago, where the 1938 event will be held, that they are practically certain that they'll hit the 5,000 mark this spring, an increase of about 1,000 teams.

"During the period of the tournament, this means that some 40,000 to 60,000 persons at least will go to Chicago from two to three days."

The Intercity tournament which will be held in Alliance this spring, includes bowlers from northern and central Ohio. A marked increase over last year in the number of contestants is assured.

Mansfield, which was host to this tournament several years ago, will make a bid to land the 1939 event, but if not successful is almost certain to be chosen for the 1940 tournament city

The third national tournament of the Loyal Order of Moose opens at the Meder Recreation alleys March 3 with about 100 more teams than the number that competed in the 1937 contest.

Meder alleys also will be host to the seventh annual tourney of the Ohio American Legion which opens March 26 Legion officials predict it will be the biggest in the history of the event.

First Sundstrand 'Adders,' Made In '14, Still In Use

In 1908, two engineers with inventive inclinations, became impressed by the fact that adding machines in use at that time were very cumbersome and complicated, both in construction and in operation. Why was it necessary to have so many keys and so much mechanism for the simple task of addition. Would it not be possible to do the same work with only 10 keys Why was it necessary to have such a large and cumbersome machine?

It was thoughts of this nature in the minds of David and Oscar Sundstrand that resulted in the ideas that eventually produced the Underwood Sundstrand 10-key figuring machine—the machine which is now popularly known and extensively used throughout the entire world, T. G. Bigler of Bigler's Adding Machine and Typewriter Exchange, says.

In a tiny, poorly lighted workshop, located at Rockford, Ill., with but few tools at their disposal, these two men started their task. Months were devoted to planning; to experimenting with many ideas; to the testing of materials; to the laborious shaping of hand-made parts and to their assembly.

"Finally, after many months of patient endeavor, despite the bitter disappointments and many discouragements encountered, these two men announced that they had solved the problem of constructing a practical and simple 10-key machine for figuring work," Mr Bigler points out.

"In 1914 they completed their first model for the market. In that year, 15 machines were made by hand and sold. As proof of the quality and durability of Underwood Sundstrand machines, it is interesting to note that some of these first machines are still in active use.

"Since those first machines, Underwood Sundstrand's record has been one of continual progress The increasing sales volume indicates the influence exerted upon the buying preference of the modern business executive by the superiority of the Underwood Sundstrand 10-key principle."

Mr. Bigler, as the local sales representative of Underwood Elliott Fisher company, is equipped to answer every need for modern business machines in the standard, noiseless or electric typewriter line, can also supply Underwood Sundstrand 10-key figuring machines for any type of calculating work.

There was no systematic newspaper reporting until the beginning of the 19th century.

STYLING OF 1938 MODELS GIVES SERVEL ELECTROLUX NEW CHARM

Improvements in the design and styling of the 1938 Servel Electrolux have resulted in a still greater charm of outward appearance over that of previous years, as well as making the refrigerator more serviceable than ever through the addition of new conveniences, according to George McFadden, sales manager of the Ohio Fuel Gas company, who has announced that the new 1938 models are now on display in the company's salesrooms.

Provisions for easier facility in obtaining ice cubes in the deluxe models is one of the important features mentioned in the announcement which is based on information furnished by George S. Jones, jr., vice president and general manager of Servel, Inc.

"Carrying out a rule that is fast becoming a tradition, Servel engineers have produced a new model for 1938 that excels that of 1937 just as the 1937 model excelled that of the previous excelled that of the year previous," Mr. McFadden stated. "Aiming to give the buying public the best there is in modern automatic refrigeration, Servel engineers work year in and year out to keep Servel refrigerators absolutely up-to-date.

"Of course, the 1938 Servel Electrolux refrigerator contains a freezing unit that differs from other automatic refrigerators in that it has no moving parts, thus assuring silence, long life and economy, and which has become so popular in recent years that more than a million such refrigerators have been installed in the city and rural homes of the United States and Canada."

"Through the ingenuity and skill of the men in the engineering department of Servel, all the new 1938 models are provided with a concealed or 'disappearing hinge' which eliminates all hinge parts from the exterior of the cabinet, thus permanently removing any projections or openings. The beauty of outer design which has characterized the refrigerator for several years has been enhanced in this year's models, because it has provided flowing and sleek lines for the cabinet.

"As simple as a twist of the wrist is the method of getting the ice trays out of he refrigerator. Just as easy is the removal of the ice cubes from the trays. There is no longer any need to jerk and haul or use hot water to dislodge the trays. There is this new device, a release lever, which one merely lifts up gently and which at once frees the tray without a struggle.

"A new stainless steel ice cube release ends the 'ice cube fight' forever. All one needs to do is to exert a slight pressure on the release and the ice cubes are quickly expelled, either all together or one at a time.

"The entire operation of getting the cubes out of the refrigerator and into the pan requires only a few seconds. It has been estimated that 20 per cent more ice can be obtained by this new improvement because there is no loss in melting as there is no need now to place the tray of ice cubes under the faucet to dislodge them."

Cites Low Cost Of Modernizing Old Bathrooms

From $250 to $350 is the average cost of modernizing the old-fashioned bathroom, according to Charles Hoffman, president of the Charles Hoffman company, North Walnut street plumbers.

"The typical bathroom modernization project consists of the replacement of a tub on legs with a built-in fixture, the installaion of a new closet, and the replacement of an out-model and small wall-hung lavatory with a handsome modern fixture, either of the pedestal type or with two metal legs," Mr. Hoffman says.

"Included, too, in the typical bathroom modernizing project is the installation of a shower either over the tub or in one of the inexpensive and leak-proof metal cabinets, a new medicine cabinet with modernistic mirror, and built-in china accessories."

In many projects, colored plumbing fixtures are used. In all bathrooms, however, some color is provided for, either in the fixtures or in the wall and floor materials, shower curtains, or drapes.

The universal popularity of chromium as a plating for plumbing fittings such as faucets, shower heads, and waste controls is evident. The public apparently is thoroughly appreciative of the non-tarnishing and non-corrosive features of chromium and the fact that it may be kept sparkling and lustrous with the minimum of effort.

In addition to plumbing, the Hoffman company also installs heating plants, furnaces, pumps, air conditioning units for both houses and business houses, and does all kinds of sheet metal work.
